SAN FRANCISCO BLACKED OUT 57 MINUTES

Bay Area and Capital Plunged Into Darkness at Warning of Enemy Planes.

PUBLIC KEEPS CALM

New York Has Third Air Raid Alarm; Defense Units Work Smoothly.

(By International News Service)

SAN FRANCISCO — Blackouts plunged the San Francisco Bay area and the state capital, Sacramento, 90 miles inland, into total darkness shortly before dawn today as the roar of enemy planes off the California coast presumably had been picked up by delicate army electrical detectors.

The San Francisco blackout lasted 57 minutes, from 2:23 a. m., until the "all clear" signal was given at 3 20 a. m.

Sacramento went dark at the same time but the blackout in that city was lifted two minutes earlier.

In Southern California — Los Angeles, San Diego and Santa Barbara — radio stations were ordered shut down by the federal communications commission.

That the blackouts were "the real thing" and not tests was apparent, for Lieut. General John L. De Witt, commanding the fourth army, had only a few hours previously assured the citizens of San Francisco that: "We will never darken this community nor sound an alert unless enemy planes are threatening."

The 2,000,000 residents of San Francisco and environs took the blackout with comparative calmness and efficiency, although a few vagrant beams of light occasionally stabbed through the deep darkness.

Famous western hotels, such as the Palace, were as dark and silent as gigantic tombs. During the blackouts a switch was pulled in the Palace, plunging the hotel into complete darkness.

This correspondent was forced to walk down six floors in the hotel because all service depending upon electricity had ceased.

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Tin Pan Alley got into the war today.

City's Dime Stores Remove Jap Novelties

Employes in Mansfield five-and-ten cent stores and others today began removing from their counters Japanese-made novelties in protest against that country's unwarned attack upon the United States.

Managers of the stores in some cases received orders from their headquarters but others made the move on their own initiative. They announced that the stock of Japanese articles had dwindled in the last two years and that it was necessary to remove only a few cheap novelties from their counters.

Pictured at the right is President Roosevelt as he delivered his address to the nation last night on the status of the war. He said "We are going to win this war and we are going to win the peace that follows." He dismissed as "fantastic" Japanese claims that they have already won ascendancy in the Pacific.

CREWS' FATE UNKNOWN

Flagship and Cruiser Go Down Resisting Attempt at Invasion.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Britain lost two of her mightiest capital ships today—the powerful new 35,000-ton battleship Prince of Wales and the 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse — both sunk by the Japanese off Malaya in the most disastrous single blow struck to the British navy in the whole war.

Their loss was announced by the admiralty without word of how they were sent to the bottom of the Pacific ocean or of the fate of their crews, together more than 3,000 men.

A Japanese communique said they were destroyed by air attack.

This, if confirmed, would be the first known sinking of any warship of the size either of the Prince of Wales or the Repulse by aerial bombardment.

The Prince of Wales, only recently dispatched to the Pacific, was the flagship of the fleet Britain had massed and organized to defend the empire in the Far East.

The warships went down in one of the British navy's blackest days "whilst carrying out operations against the Japanese attack on Malaya," the admiralty said.

It added that "no details were yet available except those contained in the Japanese official communique which claims that both ships were sunk by air attack."

The Prince of Wales was flying the flag of Admiral Sir Tom Phillips, commander of the British fleet in eastern waters

The lack of details shrouded the fate of the crews of the two great warships, whose normal comple-

War Department Says Nippon Troop Transport Sinks During Battle; Manila Reports Fifth Columnists Active.

BULLETIN

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—Two waves of Japanese bombers raided Manila and its suburbs this afternoon, hitting hard around military centers including Nichols air field, Fort William McKinley and the Nelson airport districts.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — War department communique No. 1 of the United States-Japanese war announced today that the U. S. army and navy forces had repulsed a Japanese landing attempt on the Island of Luzon in the Philippines. This is the main island on which Manila is situated.

The communique was the first to be issued by the war department and was based on a report last night from Lieut. Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur, chief of the U. S. army Far East command.

(News dispatches direct from Manila today related, however, that new Japanese landing attempts were in progress on a 150-mile stretch of the northwest and west coasts of Luzon.)

The communique announced that army and navy bombers had scored direct hits on three Japanese ships and that three other ships also were damaged. One ship capsized and sank immediately, the communique said.

The communique stated that thus far there had been no Japanese attacks on the southern groups of islands of the archipelago.

The text of the communique:

"Information received last night from the commanding general, far eastern command, reveals the defeat of a hostile attack against the west coast of Luzon between San Fernando and Vigan.

"Our first bombing attacks on six transports at Vigan resulted in direct hits on three hostile ships and damage to the remaining three, one ship capsizing and sinking immediately.

"The navy air force participated in the attack in close cooperation with the army. No operations have as yet materialized in the southern islands."

Red Cross Committee Decides Today on Means of Raising Quota of $30,000.

The fund-raising and public information committee set up under the Disaster Preparedness and Relief program of Richland county chapter of the Red Cross was scheduled to go into action today to devise ways and means of raising the $30,000 quota set up by national headquarters as a war-time measure.

At yesterday's executive board meeting the chapter officially accepted the national quota and delegated the job of raising it to the fund-raising and public information committee headed by W. J. Spreng.

Spreng, in Cleveland on business, was contacted by telephone by the executive office and in accepting the task he requested the executive secretary, Miss Lenore Van Gundia, to call a meeting of the full committee for today at 3 p. m.

FDR Places U. S. In War With Italy, Nazis

Warns of 'Sneak Punch' on Either Coast As Dispatches Hint German War Declaration Due Soon.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's analysis of the pattern of world conflict placed the United States today in a state of informal war with Germany and Italy.

Although formally engaged in war against only Japan, he promised to fight the Axis "with everything we've got."

Foreign dispatches hinted that a German declaration of war against the United States was forthcoming. Mr. Roosevelt warned of the real and immediate danger of a sneak punch—like that which rocked Pearl Harbor—on both our coasts, Atlantic or Pacific.

Other advices here suggested that Adolf Hitler might prefer for the time being to avoid actual war with the United States.

But in a war report to the nation that made previous fireside chats seem of small consequence in comparison, Mr. Roosevelt last night blunted no words in saying that we are in a fight for our collective lives—and that we will win the war, and the peace to follow.

The president's warning that "Germany and Italy . . . consider themselves at war with the United States at this moment" brought from congressmen the comment that it was a "realistic recognition" of facts.

"Of course we all think that Germany and Italy are going to follow the Japanese as brothers in this Axis agreement."

Rayburn has said that congress would declare war on Germany and Italy as quickly as it did against Japan if those two countries decide to attack the United States.

Navy Seeks More Combat Ships, Roosevelt Calls For 7-Day Arms Making Week.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A substantial expansion of the naval construction program, already history's biggest, and President Roosevelt's announced policy of a seven-day week in all munitions industries promised today to quicken the pace of America's war-time effort.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the house naval committee disclosed that the navy is preparing legislation to authorize the building of still more combat ships which will be started just as soon as new or existing ways are available.

Vinson said he would insist that the new program emphasize battleships, apparently to offset any similar construction which Japan might undertake. The Georgian gave on details of the projected expansion.

At present, the United States has about 345 combat ships in the five major categories—battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines—under construction and on last Navy Day, Oct. 27, the number is service totalled 346.

Vinson called his committee into executive session today to permit the members to question Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, navy surgeon-general, as to whether the navy's top-ranking officers are physically fit for war-time duty.

Mayor Strikes Reporter, Breaks His Glasses In City Hall Tiff

Mayor William J. Locke, angered at being questioned about city business, pushed a News-Journal reporter out of his office today, and struck him in the face, knocking the reporter's glasses to the floor where they broke.

The mayor immediately turned to his secretary, Betty Mae Thompson, who witnessed the incident, and said:

"You saw him! You saw him hit me first!"

The reporter, William F. Murray, who covers city building and police for The News-Journal, denied that he had touched the mayor. He said his back was turned and that a second before he was struck, the mayor was pushing him through the doorway.

The mayor picked up Murray's glasses and handed them to him, murmuring:

"I'm awfully sorry. You hit me first. I'm awfully sorry. You hit me first."

Reached by telephone later, the mayor insisted that Murray had struck him first and that Miss Thompson could verify that. He also denied Murray's claim that his (Murray's) back was turned toward him.

"He hit me in the belly," the mayor said.

Miss Thompson was later asked by The News-Journal:

"Did you see Murray hit the mayor?"

She replied:

"No, I didn't see him hit the mayor. However, the mayor said to Murray 'You hit me first' and then I heard Murray say 'I didn't hit you until after you hit me.'"

Commenting on the mayor's statement that he had struck first, Murray, who weighs 173 pounds and is athletic, said:

"If I had hit him first, he wouldn't have been able to hit me."

Murray said that as the mayor pushed him through the doorway he braced himself and that the mayor may have brushed against his arm, which he said was in a normal position at his side.

Japs Defeated During Attack on Philippines

Army, Navy Drive Off Invaders, Sink Enemy Transport Ship; Score Three Hits; Damage 3 Other Craft.

The communique did not reveal the size of the Japanese forces that attempted the landing.

The scene of the fighting is not far from the Japanese island of Formosa. It is likely that the forces may have embarked from there, although no hint was given in the communiques.

The fact that the communique said there were no operations reported in the southern Philippine Islands was taken as an offset to the Japanese claims that operations are under way at Davao.

The communique was issued directly by the war department to newspapermen in the army offices, instead of being released through the White House, which has handled the war news previously.

White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said that henceforth the war and navy departments would handle most of the news about their operations.

Such news from the departments, however, will meet the two conditions laid down by the president yesterday: accuracy and proof that publication will not aid the enemy.

Japs Suffer Heavy Losses In Attack on Philippines

By R. P. CRONIN

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—Under cover of a heavy nightlong bombardment from the air, the Japanese succeeded in landing troops in northern Luzon today after suffering heavy casualties inflicted by American warplanes which sank one transport and damaged at least two more, U. S. army headquarters announced.

A communique issued shortly before noon by General Douglas MacArthur, U. S. commander in the Philippines, said the Japanese had effected landings at Aparri, at the extreme northern tip of the island approximately 400 miles from Manila, and perhaps at several other nearby points.

Philippines constabulary reports declared that the Japanese also had gained a foothold at Vigan, on the Luzon west coast about midway between Manila and Aparri.

All indications were that a heavy battle still was raging all along the northern and northwest coasts of the island, with naval, air and land forces involved.

The army communique said the exact strength of the attacking Japanese forces was not known, but declared gravely:

"The enemy is in heavy force off the northern coast of Luzon, extending from Vigan to Aparri."

The announcement declared that six Japanese transports, escorted by large naval units and aircraft, were engaged in landing operations off Vigan about 7:30 a. m. (6:30 p. m. EST Tuesday) but did not say whether a landing actually had been effected there.

In terse official language the bulletin told of the damage inflicted upon the attacking Japanese flotilla by the American air force.

"Our bombing attacks on these ships created grave damage. Three transports were directly hit, one immediately capsizing. Bombs were observed hitting close to three others."

Advices relayed from the constabulary commander at Tuguegarao, capital of Cagayan province, where Aparri is situated, said the Japanese had paved the way for the landing attempt there with a nightlong aerial bombardment.

Shortly after this report was received all communications with Vigan, Aparri and Tuguegarao were interrupted.

Vigan, a city of 19,939, is the capital of Ilocos Sur province. Aparri, only safe port on the north coast, has a population of about 20,000.

(The official Tokyo radio announced early today that Japanese forces had succeeded in landing at several points north of Manila and said that operations still were proceeding. It also reported the sinking of an American submarine off Palau island and an unidentified American transport of 15,000 tons in Manila bay.

The sea-borne Japanese assault on northern Luzon came as United States and Philippine officials strove to stamp out an apparently well-organized fifth-column movement accused of causing two false air-raid alarms in Manila during the night and of setting flares to guide Japanese bombers to targets around the capital the previous night.

Observers here, speculating on the Japanese objective in attacking northern Luzon, said the invaders faced tough terrain if they hoped to advance overland to Manila.

Aparri is on the edge of a fertile farming region which extends back about 150 miles from the coast, but beyond this lies a range of almost impassable mountains which extends southward to within 100 miles of Manila.

The country is populated with savage native tribesmen descended from head-hunters.

From Vigan only a single narrow road, unsuitable for the movement of heavy equipment, leads southward.

Two false air-raid alarms which sounded in Manila during the night were attributed to spurious telephone calls to persons in charge of the sirens.

Belief was expressed that the fifth columnists had hoped to cause confusion and panic among the uneducated masses in Manila by sounding the alarms.

Air-raid observers reported that during the alerts they saw numerous red rockets rising from various places in and around the city.

An army spokesman previously had asserted that similar lights marked out certain strategic areas during raids on Nichols field and other military targets near Manila early Tuesday morning.

There still were no official figures on casualties resulting from the widespread air raids directed against Luzon since the initial assault, but an army announcement last night declared that losses had been "heavy on both sides."

American pilots and anti-aircraft gunners declared the suddenness of the Japanese assault had given the raiders an initial advantage, but expressed full confidence.

"The next time we'll give 'em hell," declared one gunner.

An American pilot said that thus far the Japanese had gotten the worst of it in individual dogfights.

"They got the first jump on us, but we're not overly-impressed," he said, "and we certainly don't think they are super-men."

Hitler Armies Withdraw to Winter Lines In Russia

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies, thwarted in their violent two-months-old drive against Moscow, were officially acknowledged today to have withdrawn to winter lines in sector after sector along the Russian battlefront.

Stirring speculation that Hitler may be up to some new trickery, a Berlin spokesman said the Nazi push eastward was through until spring.

Soviet quarters in London were quick to point out that the German admission might be an artifice to hide other plans; and, at any rate, the Russians declared they had no intention of letting the Germans dig in for what comfort they could find in snug trench dugouts. A new Soviet field army of 500,000 troops, specially equipped for the sub-zero warfare about which the Nazis have complained so bitterly, was reported being formed to bolster the Russian counter-offensive.

Official Soviet dispatches said the Germans had been blasted from Tikhvin — not voluntarily withdrawn, as the Nazis asserted —in a 10-day battle which cost them 7,000 dead.

On the central front, before Moscow, the Russians said Gen. Gregory K. Zhukov's Red armies had killed 1,400 Germans and recaptured seven villages in the Kalinin sector, 95 miles northwest of the capital.

Reports reaching London indicated that the Germans were falling back to new positions as much as 100 miles west of Moscow's defense arc, apparently planning to dig in on a line extending through Rzhev, Vyazma, Mechosk and Orel.

On the North African front, the British announced a new junction between the long-sieged Tobruk garrison and the main British imperial forces at El Adem, and declared that Axis forces were retreating more rapidly westward "under the vigorous pressure of our forces."

Cairo headquarters said British troops had recaptured Gambus, coastal base 40 miles east of Tobruk, but admitted that strong German and Italian forces remained on the western perimeter of Tobruk's defenses.

A British spokesman said Axis troops still held three strong points along the Egyptian frontier —Bardia, Halfaya and Ghirba— but declared the doom of these last centers of organized Axis resistance in eastern Libya "seems inevitable."

Renews Demand Public Be Informed on War In Pacific

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Renewed demands that the American people be fully informed regarding the Pacific situation were made by a member of the house naval committee today as the committee convened to investigate the physical fitness of "elderly admirals."

Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, naval surgeon general, was called in a secret hearing to discuss qualifications of the older officers in active war.

It was Rep. Mott (R., Ore.) who demanded that the people be given additional information about the Pacific situation.

"The people ought to be told all about it," Mott declared. "There is no doubt that Japan knows everything about it already and that is the only reason for withholding details from the people. No matter how bad it is, the people will fight on."

Mott cited the fact that just shortly after the Japanese claimed to have sunk two of Britain's largest ships, the British officially confirmed the claim today.

"I don't see why we can't adopt their practice of informing the people quickly," Mott said.

Indies Throw Forces Into Asia Fighting

SINGAPORE — (AP) — The Netherlands East Indies threw strong reinforcements of warships and warplanes into the battle of southeastern Asia today as British land and air forces slowed down a Japanese assault on northern Malaya.

Dutch bombers and fighters flew in yesterday and already have joined British, Australian and New Zealand air units which have been pounding Japanese transports and land bases in Thailand since dawn Monday.

The Dutch fliers also have been fighting alongside British empire air forces to contest Japan's admittedly vigorous efforts to win quick mastery of the air.

ments together exceeded 3,000 men.

The loss of the Prince of Wales, one of the newest and most powerful of the British battleships and a vessel especially armored against air attack, was a particularly grievous blow to the royal navy.

Previously, in more than two years of war, Britain had lost only two of her capital ships, the battleship Royal Oak, 29,150 tons, sunk by a German submarine Oct. 14, 1939, in Scapa Flow, and the 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood, sunk by the German battleship Bismarck May 24, 1941, in the Atlantic.

Approximately 1,300 men were lost aboard the Hood and 810 men abroad the Royal Oak.

The Prince of Wales was one of the vessels which hunted down the Bismarck in the Royal navy's quick revenge for the loss of the Hood.

The Atlantic charter was drawn up aboard her in August by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

She arrived in Singapore last week as the flagship of Admiral Sir Tom Phillips, newly appointed commander of the newly-created Eastern fleet, proudly leading a flotilla to reinforce the British navy in face of the Japanese threat which turned into war.

The British announcement came a short time after Japanese imperial headquarters in Tokyo had broadcast a communique announcing that the two vessels had been sunk by Japanese bombers this afternoon, Tokyo time, off the east coast of the Malay peninsula.

The Repulse, the Japanese said, sank instantly after being hit by the Japanese air bombs while the Prince of Wales, a vessel specially armored against air attack, was damaged, sought to escape and then was attacked again, suffering additional hits which sent her under the waves.

The Repulse, it was claimed in Tokyo, sank instantly after bomb hits at 2:29 p. m. today Tokyo time (12:29 a. m. EST).

The battle cruiser Repulse is a vessel of 32,000 tons completed in 1916. Her normal complement is between 1,181 and 1,205 men.

The battleship Prince of Wales, which was launched in 1939, is one of the Royal navy's newest vessels and went to Singapore shortly before Japan declared war on Great Britain and the United States.

Nazis Say Japs Also Sank King George V

BERLIN —(AP)— DNB quoted Japanese naval authorities today as announcing they had reason to believe that the 35,000-ton British battleship King George V also had been sunk with the Prince of Wales and battle cruiser Repulse in air attacks on Britain's Far Eastern fleet.

(No explanation was offered for this reported belief and there was no confirmation from any other quarter that the new British battleship, sistership of the Prince of Wales, had been it or even involved in the air-sea battle.)

(The German wireless, heard in New York, carried this: "Flash—Tokyo — the Japanese naval office announced that also the British naval battleship 'King George' has been sunk.")

FDR WARNS OF 'SNEAK PUNCH'

Message To Nation Places U. S. at Informal War With Italy, Germany.

Mr. Roosevelt said:

"So far the news is all bad. Casualty lists will be large."

Acknowledging a "serious setback in Hawaii" and that the country must be prepared to hear that Midway, Wake and Guam islands have been captured, he declared there was no impregnable defense against blows without warning and urged the public, the press and the radio to wait for the facts.

"Most earnestly," the war president continued, "I urge my fellow countrymen to reject all rumors. These ugly little hints of complete disaster fly thick and fast in war time."

He said the enemy spread many a rumor to create fear and confusion among the public and to goad the government to denials and admissions of information eagerly sought in Axis capitals. Mr. Roosevelt said he did not yet know the "exact damage" at Pearl Harbor but that "admittedly, the damage is serious." He dismissed as "fantastic" rumors that Japan had gained naval control of the Pacific.

Mr. Roosevelt denounced Hitler, Benito Mussolini and the Japanese war lords. He left no doubt that the war, the all out, total, world war, is on with Great Britain and her dominions, the Soviet Union, the United States and associated powers on one side, and the Axis on the other—all of the Axis.

"Remember always," Mr. Roosevelt said, "that Germany and Italy regardless of any formal declaration of war, consider themselves at war with the United States at this moment just as much as they consider themselves at war with Britain and Russia. And Germany puts all the other republics of America into the same category of enemies.

"Powerful and resourceful gangsters have banded together to make war upon the whole human race. Their challenge has now been flung at the United States.

"We must be set to face a long war. The attack on Pearl Harbor can be repeated at any one of many points in both oceans and along both our coast lines against all the rest of the hemisphere.

"Our ocean-girt hemisphere is not immune from attack.

"Your government knows that for weeks Germany has been telling Japan that if Japan did not attack the United States, Japan would not share in dividing the spoils with Germany when the peace came. She was promised by Germany that if she came in she would receive the complete and perpetual control of the whole Pacific area—and that means not only the Far East, not only the islands in the Pacific, but also a stranglehold on the west coast of North, Central and South America.

"We also know that Germany and Japan are conducting their military and naval operations in accordance with a joint plan. That plan considers all peoples and nations which are not helping the Axis powers as common enemies of each and every one of the Axis powers.

"That is their simple and obvious grand strategy."

So Mr. Roosevelt said he had accepted the challenge and that we would accept no result except victory, final and complete. We are in the war, he explained, not for conquest or for vengeance, but for a world in which our children will be safe. He said we expected to eliminate the danger from Japan, but that Hitler and Mussolini must go, too.

He compared the actions of Japan in Asia and of Hitler and Mussolini in Europe and Africa for 10 years past and said:

"It is all of one pattern.

"Without warning—without warning—without warning."

Again and again Mr. Roosevelt repeated that phrase as he cited surprise attacks by the Axis powers on peaceful nations.

"We may acknowledge that our enemies have performed a brilliant feat of deception, perfectly time and executed with great skill," Mr. Roosevelt said of the Japanese attack in the Pacific. "It was a thoroughly dishonorable deed, but we must face the fact that modern warfare as conducted in the Nazi manner is a dirty business. We don't like it—we didn't want to get into it—but we are in it and we're going to fight it with everything we've got.

"We are now in this war. We are all in it—all the way. Every single man, woman and child is a partner in the most tremendous undertaking in American history. We must share together the bad news and the good news, the defeats and the victories—the changing fortunes of war."

He promised to give the facts to the public as fast as they became available subject first to complete check on their accuracy and, second, that release of the information would not prove valuable to the enemy.

There is enough food "at present," he assured the nation, to provide amply here and to leave much left over for export to less favored partners in the anti-Axis drive. No sacrifice would be felt or resented, Mr. Roosevelt was sure, by men privileged to serve in the army, by citizens burdened with mounting taxes, or by those who must forego extra profits or curtail their manner of living. But he warned that there was a bitter shortage of metal and that half of the vital metals used for civilian consumption this year would have to be diverted to the war effort from now on.

Civilian Defense In Mansfield

DANGERS that seemed remote even a few days ago are now being accepted as imminent—and the air raid alarms which many Americans confidently believed would be confined to England, Germany, Italy, and other distant places, have become realities on the west and east coasts of the United States.

Those minority forces that sought to create national disunity by opposing what were termed "foreign policies" have now joined in the chorus of approval of "all out" defense and conduct of aggressive warfare against vicious assailants of this nation.

Lindbergh, whose isolationist preachments gained a wide following of gullible Americans, says: ". . . We must now turn every effort to building the greatest and most efficient army, navy and air force in the world."

Senator Wheeler has gone into quick reverse with: "The only thing now is to do our best to lick hell out of them."

John L. Lewis, whose recent conduct indicated that he regarded the closed shop issue as more important than production for national security, now joins in "support of our government to the day of its ultimate triumph over Japan and all other enemies."

What has not been previously recognized by these men, and by others who have promulgated or accepted isolationist doctrines, is that such a thing as "isolation" is impossible for the United States or for the Western Hemisphere, and that "defense" also involves aid to all nations engaged in the present war against the principles and dastardly practices of the Axis powers—Germany, Italy and Japan.

It should be quickly realized by every American that this is a different kind of war from any in which the United States has heretofore been involved, with a fanatic leadership and following which the people of this country find it difficult to understand and are likely to under-estimate.

While the immediate peril appears confined to coastal cities, there should be no minimizing the chance of later spread to inland sections, and precautionary steps being taken in Mansfield, and in large and small cities all over the country, are fully justified by existing conditions.

Request by Chief of Police Bates that observers of any un-American activities report to him at once accords with the proclamation issued by President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon, involving conduct of nationals of Germany, Italy and Japan and declaring that all Nazi subjects 14 years of age and older within the United States shall be considered alien enemies—the same applying to Japanese and citizens of Italy.

Whatever plans are developed in Mansfield for civilian defense, under direction of Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch as committee chairman, will undoubtedly be given full official and public co-operation, as it is in this way that the entire defense set-up for the nation is to be accomplished.

New Citizens To Be Welcomed

THERE is an element of timeliness in the public recognition which is to be given tomorrow evening to the one hundred and fifty Mansfield and Richland county foreign-born residents who have recently been accorded the honor of being accepted into American citizenship.

This is a proud distinction which native-born Americans are sometimes inclined to disregard, or to accept as a matter of course, but which those who have come from other parts of the world are more likely to appreciate—particularly at a time when the native lands of many of them are torn by war and suffering at the hands of ruthless rulers.

In the inspirational surroundings of one of Mansfield's new Junior high schools—John Simpson—which symbolizes the equality of educational opportunities in the country of their adoption, these new citizens are to be privileged to hear an address by Ohio's Lieutenant Governor Paul M. Herbert and to become otherwise acquainted with the privileges and responsibilities of American citizens. The event is sponsored by the educational committee of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce.

Coming at a time when the United States is girding itself for battle to perpetuate the principles of individual liberty and human freedom, upon which it was founded, it is especially appropriate that more than ordinary care be taken to instill the fundamentals of true Americanism into these new citizens—keeping in mind that this is also only a few days removed from national observance of Bill of Rights day, which will be next Monday, December 15.

All-American Olympics Planned

ARGENTINA is to be host for the first Pan-American Olympic Games, now being planned for 1942, unless war prevents. The 21 independent nations of this hemisphere are co-operating on the project. Contests in winter sports will be held at Mendoza in the Andes next July. Because the seasons reverse our own, all the other contests will take place in Buenos Aires at the end of the Argentine spring, which is its loveliest season. They will begin November 21.

A committee here is selecting a team of 200 athletes to represent the United States. There will be competition in 25 different sports, including track and field, swimming, tennis, baseball, winter sports, polo, yachting, wrestling, fencing, shooting, rowing and cycling.

This may be a fine thing. It is expected to attract a throng of tourists to the scene and introduce a few thousand more North Americans to a very beautiful South American city about which they have been ignorant in the past. Buenos Aires, with a population of nearly 4,000,000, fine buildings and parks and world-renowned newspapers, will be a revelation to many of these visitors.

But our southern neighbors have never gone in much for this sort of thing and have not in the past produced Olympic winners. Will the purpose of the revived modern Olympic games—to create international good fellowship—be served if Uncle Sam's visiting athletes carry off all the honors?

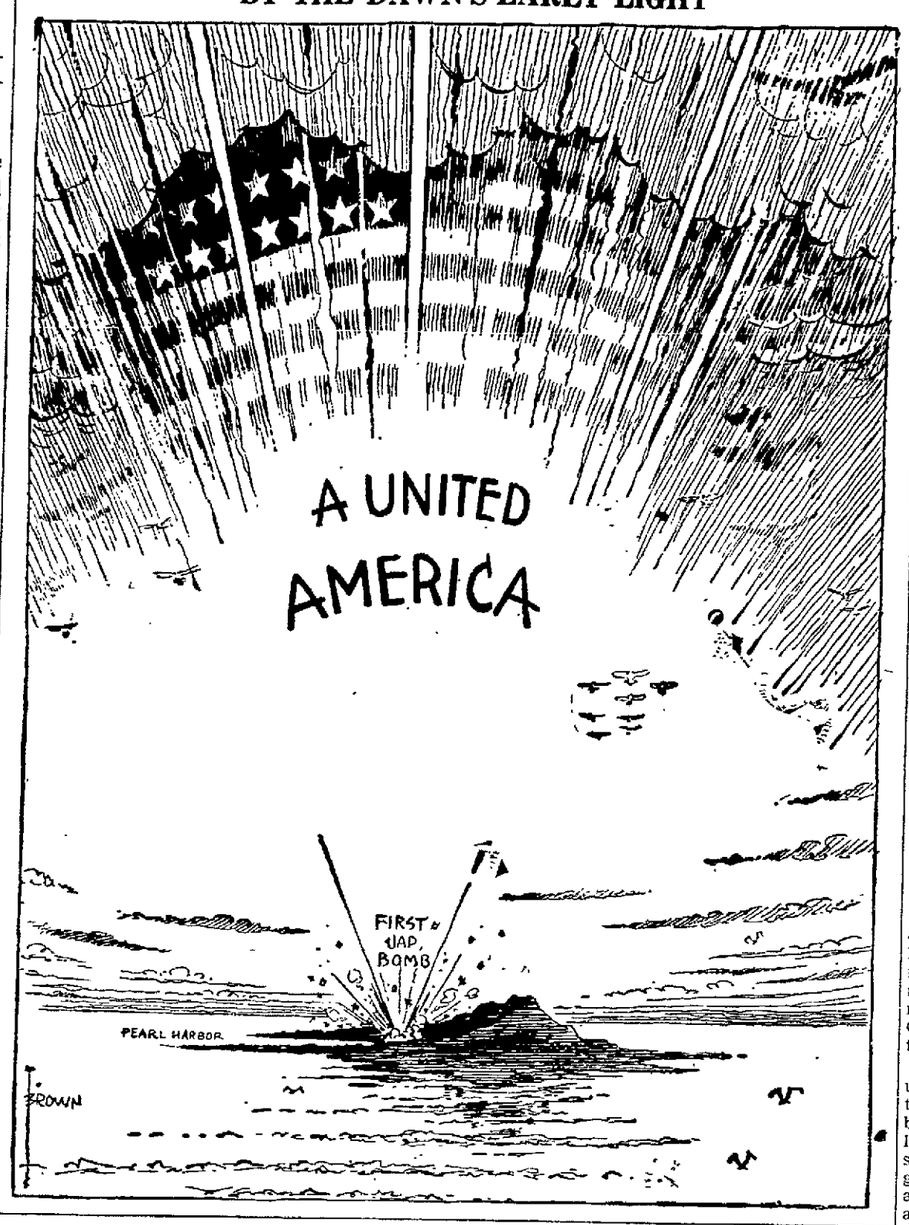
This week is being nationally observed as Bible week—and readers of the selected verse printed on this page each day are reminded that the complete book is a perpetual "best seller."

Tip to Americans: They're having less mental trouble in England because their minds are all pointed one way. Unity and teamwork are great healers.

So live that when the first of a month arrives the bills that come in the mail are new ones.

There should be no striking now except at the enemy.

BY THE DAWN'S EARLY LIGHT



Analyst Explains Japan's Moves

—By JAMES R. YOUNG

Editor's Note—James Young, noted author and expert on Far Eastern affairs, was recalled to New York by International News Service immediately after his lecture in Mansfield Monday night. Following is the first of his articles touching on early phases of the Japanese war against the United States.

* * *

JAPANESE air raiders, and parachutists who might attempt a landing in California, probably would originate from airplane carriers accompanied by speedy submarines of the latest type and escorted by destroyer convoys.

Point of origin of this attacking squadron may be assumed to be Formosa, Japan's great Gibraltar of the Pacific, 500 miles north of the Philippines.

These units probably left their bases ten or 12 days ago. In fact, some are understood to have done their scouting job a month back, preparatory to the grand imperial headquarters war plan which only awaited the palace flash from Tokyo to proceed with carefully preordained formulae.

The two American supply transport ships reported sunk 1,300 miles and 700 miles off the Pacific coast were probably intercepted as the main body approached its hunting grounds for surprise attacks. If the main force does not appear in a few sunrises, sealed orders may take them to the Panama area.

Japan is using all of 50 submarines, with a reserve 30 to 50 in home waters, for attacks on likely American and British invaders who should shortly arrive in the Japanese zone for direct assaults on vulnerable cities, perhaps in liaison with Soviet airmen based in Siberia, only 700 miles from the emperor's capital.

Japan may be holding on to her capital ships but they are weaker than those of the democracies in fire power, armament, and maneuverability. They are granted an edge in speed, however.

I have seen some of Japan's air carriers on the southern China coast. Tokyo's admirals evidently have six between Formusa and the Philippines. I would judge three, operated out of the South Sea mandated islands for the destruction rained on Pearl Harbor and Honolulu, with three remaining close to home ports for North Pacific operations.

* * *

PARACHUTISTS reported near Honolulu, in Malaya and the Philippines substantiate reports several months back that the Nazis were drilling Japanese regiments, the first taking part against Chinese at Ichang, where they failed.

As one cognizant of the toughness of Japan's fighters ashore and afloat, and knowing their code of fatalism and religious fanaticism, coupled with an inbred hatred for occidentals, I warn every American in an area where parachutists are likely to land to beware of the trained and developed brutality, viciousness and arrogance of Japan's soldiers and sailors.

General Iwane Matsui, commander of Japan's forces at the infamous assault on Nanking's residents, described his men in hand combat as "wild mountain beasts, with claws of iron and weapons of steel." From personal observation, these men are ferocious, ready to use hatchets, knives and even gas.

* * *

JAPAN seeks to knock out the American and British naval power in the Pacific before Russia attacks her from Siberia. Some Japanese are cognizant of Japan's vulnerability, hence the use of surprise strategy.

Japan will attempt landing parties at Singapore, Manila, Honolulu, and even Mexican ports. Her well-drilled and fearless troops, in coordination with a naval personnel that does not reckon the danger of long overseas attacks, will set fires anywhere they can drop incendiaries.

Japan's attacks in the Pacific from Pearl Harbor to Bangkok by way of Cavite follow plans worked out in military and naval staff colleges since 1935. Concrete evidence that war seemed inevitable appeared a few weeks ago.

Timely Editorial

Stop It Now.

Defense is going to cost this country plenty without the added lug of lobbying and contract fees to outsiders and without the furthur superimposed charges of racketeering, waste and excessive profits in any direction.

Current revelations on these various matters are filled with bad odors. Capping the recently filed suit of a former Democratic member of congress from Ohio for $687,000 as a lobbying fee on a single contract is the present disclosure of fees amounting to more than $189,000 which subcontractors agreed to pay a New York broker for his "services."

Fortunately congress is being aroused and is bringing out the facts through investigating committees of both senate and house. The evidence is not confined to lobbyist and broker fees, but has thrown light upon abuses in actual defense construction.

The lid has been only tilted. But a mere start has been made in uncovering waste, mismanagement and worse.—Kansas City Times.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"To Spill the Beans."

Spilling the beans is spoiling things—and it has meant exactly that since back among the ancients.

The colloquialism harks back to a custom at elections in Greece of old.

Beans would be used for ballots, and they were deposited in a helmet.

If the holder of the helmet dropped it, or if it fell, or if in some other way the beans were spilt,—it made a lot of trouble.

It still does.

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Your Faith In Me.

You who have always so believed
In me, that I was right
How much I owe you. My success
Is built upon the might

Of this belief you hold. I could
Not have gone very far
If you had never said I could
My dreams hitch to a star.

It was your faith in me that gave
Me courage and I know
How much of this success is yours
How much to you I owe.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Kurusu Tipped Hand By His Fury At Red, White and Blue Insignia

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The U. S. armed forces might have had a valuable tip regarding Special Envoy Saburo Kurusu's actual "peace" intentions if they had interviewed employes of the fashionable Royal Hawaiian hotel in Honolulu.

Kurusu made a one-night stop-over in Honolulu during his clipper flight from Tokyo to Washington, and the first thing he did after being shown to his suite was to pick up the telephone and ask for "Room Service."

"Please have several pairs of pajamas from one of the shops downstairs sent to my room at once," he ordered.

A few minutes later a bellhop brought up six pairs of pajamas of assorted hues. Kurusu examined them briefly, chose a bright-colored silk pair. The bellhop took the others away, but had hardly stepped out of the elevator when the desk clerk hailed him.

"Go right back to Mr. Kurusu's room," the clerk directed. "Something's happened. He sounded very excited."

The bellboy rushed back to find the eminent Japanese visitor boiling mad. Holding up the pajamas, he pointed to a red-white-and-blue insignia woven on the pocket. Flinging the pajamas at the bellhop, he commanded:

"Take them back! Take them back at once and tell that store I've decided I don't want any of their merchandise."

Who Was Asleep?

ALIBIS cannot very well explain away how both army and navy intelligence had their guard down so carelessly when Japanese planes swooped down out of the early morning sky at Hawaii on Sunday.

Their only explanation so far is that the Pacific is a very wide ocean. However, U. S. naval intelligence at least is supposed to keep a careful eye on when Japanese warships leave port and notify U. S. naval stations in the Pacific to watch out for them.

In recent years, however, both intelligence services have been under the command of drawing-room experts. General Sherman Miles, in charge of military intelligence, is a charming gentleman who has surrounded himself with wealthy young blue-bloods. Only members of the best families can qualify for military intelligence, and how much they know about the life around a Japanese waterfront is questionable.

Similarly, naval intelligence has been in charge of two delightful gentlemen, Captain Alan Kirk and now Captain Ted Wilkinson. Both have their names listed in the Social Register, the blue-blood list of Washington's selected socialites. Wilkinson has a large mansion across the Potomac in Virginia, and there he entertains in the very best manner, but when it came to docking the U. S. S. Mississippi in New York it took him six and a half hours.

Captains Kirk and Wilkinson are great assets at dinner parties, and apparently want all their young men to be likewise, for no man can get into naval intelligence unless both grandfathers and grandmothers were born in the U. S. A. Not even Wendell Willkie could qualify.

Obviously it is the man who can speak a few languages, is not afraid to get his hands dirty in close contact with life, and who is not too particular regarding the percentage of blue blood in his veins, who should be able to bring in shipping information.

* * *

Mrs. Roosevelt's Reaction.

MRS. ROOSEVELT is one of the most even-tempered, good-natured persons in the world. But no one in Washington was more irate than she when the news first broke that Japan had sprung a Hitler double-cross on Hawaii during the middle of her husband's appeal to Emperor Hirohito.

On the fateful Sunday of the bombardment, Mrs. Roosevelt came into the White House while the president was talking to the Japanese ambassador. She said nothing at the time, but her lips tightened into a firm straight line—sure sign that the First Lady's dander is up.

Afterward, she told friends:

"Imagine the nerve of that man sitting with my husband in the White House when Japanese bombs were falling on our boys! And when I came in he got up and actually bowed and was full of smiles!"

* * *

No-Appeaser Ickes.

THE one member of the cabinet who had a consistently 100 per cent, though sometimes unpopular, batting record regarding Japan was the toe-stepping, hit-'em-harder Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes.

No one outside the cabinet ever knew just how many tough fights Ickes had with Secretary of State Hull over appeasing Japan. For a time it got so that Hull would not speak to him.

Ickes argued way back in 1937, when Japan first invaded China, that the United States should cooperate with Britain in shutting off Japan's oil and the raw materials of war. And he kept plugging this theme and getting into the hair of the state department with unremitting zeal ever since.

He brought the matter up again in 1938 when the Japanese sank the U. S. gunboat Panay, obviously a test by the war lords to see whether the United States would take it lying down.

Then, in 1940, Ickes joined with Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox in trying to persuade the president to embargo all oil, gasoline and scrap iron. Once again Secretary Hull opposed, and persuaded the president to delay the oil embargo until almost a year later, by which time Japan had built up a year's reserve of oil—which she has today.

Meanwhile, the state department got so sore at Ickes that they actually started a bureau of their own regarding the islands of the Caribbean, competing with Ickes' division of Territories and Insular Affairs. In fact, the state department almost hired as chief of this division the governor of the Virgin Islands whom Ickes had fired.

America First.

A FAIR analogy can be drawn between the gentlemen of the state department and the America First committee which is now disbanding. Both were sincere, and definitely felt that the best way to treat the dictators was to give them more room to expand. Once Japan had taken a part of China, they felt, she would be satisfied; and once Hitler had taken Austria and the Sudetenland, he also would be satisfied.

Apparently they had their heads too far in the clouds or did not understand human nature sufficiently to realize that the thirst of a dictator never is quenched. It was this blind policy which opened the nation to attack when its guard was down.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I took the opening of the opera season with a highball and pipe—that is to say, from the depths of an armchair near an open fire that was some nine and a half miles from the Golden Horseshoe, where 4,000 of the faithful gathered.

As the "Marriage of Figaro" unfolded at the Met, I thumbed through a new and delightful book called "The Opera," by Wallace Brockway and Herbert Weinstock, and turned up little nuggets of fact so interesting that after awhile I got up and got pad and pencil and made notes on the things I found.

It may be that you are familiar with all these things that I am about to pass along: it was news to me, and so I'm afraid you're going to have to sit still or turn to your favorite comic strip.

* * *

I LEARNED, for instance, that Pope Clement IX was once the most popular librettist of his time . . . that among American composers of opera was a signer of the Declaration of Independence (Francis Hopkinson) . . . That "Aida" has been performed more often than any other single opera in America (301 times) . . . That an opera once caused a revolution in Belgium ("La Muette de Portici") . . . That in 1920 a 200-year-old opera began a run in London that lasted for 2 and a half years (The Beggar's Opera) . . . That a great philosopher once composed an extremely popular opera (Rousseau) . . . That one of the greatest of operatic composers was a chemistry professor who wrote opera only in his spare time (Borodin—"Igor") . . . That Farinelli, the great singer, was something like some of our hungry actors, who accept week-end invitations and stay three years . . . Farinelli went to Spain for a few personal appearances and stayed 25 years . . . He remained at the bidding of Philip V, King of Spain, who was hen-pecked and found escape from his nagging wife in Farinelli's singing.

* * *

THERE is much more, but I am not going to do your digging for you. I was interested in this inaugural of Mozart because Risë Stevens, next to Ezio Pinza, had the most to contribute vocally, and as she as been swimming in Hollywood pools and making pictures between excusions to Malibu beach I was wondering what the oracles would say of her contribution. I knew before Panizza lifted his baton that in Miss Stevens' dressing room was a miniature French poodle, aged nine and a half months, the gift of Nelson Eddy, her co-partner in the new film "The Chocolate Soldier." I knew, too, that at least twice in her life this young woman had turned down invitations to sign contracts with the Met because she felt she wasn't quite ready. This is real evidence of character. So I, among others, watch the progress of Risë (she sang the role of Cherubino) with interest and admiration.

Her notices were good. The critics agreed that her performance was "seasoned and expert." They said that her "Voi Che Sapete" "was, indeed, sung beautifully." . . . Seasoned, expert, sung beautifully.

I will leave Miss Stevens with these plums and her French poodle and say that the opera, on the air at the Met, or between the covers of a good book is rich, good fun. Now that the season's on, little old New York is more like New York than ever.

"I'm making out our Christmas list on the cheapest paper I could buy . . . You said we must economize this year!!"

A Farmer's Diary

A Reason for Being

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I TALKED to an old friend who has been very ill. He is now just a shadow of his former self. His cheeks are thin and sallow, his bones protrude, his hair is almost entirely gray—he totters when he walks. And yet he is a happy man, and our meeting was an inspiration to me.

"Tell me what has happened to you," said I.

"Last year, on a vacant piece of ground right near my home, I developed a rose that is hardy, blooms seven months of the year, and is so fragrant that a single clump will perfume the whole garden. I worked on fragrances of violets, too—and perfected a new kind of hollyhock. To me the memory of sweet odors is equally inspiring as the sound of a pleasant voice, a lovely landscape or the stir of life in a newborn child. I have so many ideas—so many things I plan to do before I am too old."

"But why are you so thin and pale?" I asked again.

"I forgot I hadn't told you... I've been in the hospital ten weeks. At first the surgeon said he thought the operation would be almost hopeless—but he'd do the best he could. I told him I didn't dare die yet — I had too many really worthwhile things to do. When death was near, I thought hard of my flowers. I promised the Giver of all life to use mine to make this world a better place—and then I passed the crisis and got better fast."

I looked at him searchingly. He returned my gaze, and laughed. In that frail physique, his spirit strode atop the world. I felt in him a completeness of satisfaction that was the acme of happiness.

"In another month, I'll be back on the job again," he said. "And I can hardly wait!" His face lighted up with an inward spontaneous delight.

"Don't try to go too fast," I cautioned him. "You may not be able to undertake too much."

"I'm gaining steadily," he answered quickly. "And I've never been so happy—nor so sure of myself. You'll see—I'll perfect, from the humblest flowers, such odors as the world has never known."

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1941.

Civilian Defense In Mansfield

DANGERS that seemed remote even a few days ago are now being accepted as imminent—and the air raid alarms which many Americans confidently believed would be confined to England, Germany, Italy, and other distant places, have become realities on the west and east coasts of the United States.

Those minority forces that sought to create national disunity by opposing what were termed "foreign policies" have now joined in the chorus of approval of "all out" defense and conduct of aggressive warfare against vicious assailants of this nation.

Lindbergh, whose isolationist preachments gained a wide following of gullible Americans, says: ". . . We must now turn every effort to building the greatest and most efficient army, navy and air force in the world."

Senator Wheeler has gone into quick reverse with: "The only thing now is to do our best to lick hell out of them."

John L. Lewis, whose recent conduct indicated that he regarded the closed shop issue as more important than production for national security, now joins in "support of our government to the day of its ultimate triumph over Japan and all other enemies."

What has not been previously recognized by these men, and by others who have promulgated or accepted isolationist doctrines, is that such a thing as "isolation" is impossible for the United States or for the Western Hemisphere, and that "defense" also involves aid to all nations engaged in the present war against the principles and dastardly practices of the Axis powers—Germany, Italy and Japan.

It should be quickly realized by every American that this is a different kind of war from any in which the United States has heretofore been involved, with a fanatic leadership and following which the people of this country find it difficult to understand and are likely to under-estimate.

While the immediate peril appears confined to coastal cities, there should be no minimizing the chance of later spread to inland sections, and precautionary steps being taken in Mansfield, and in large and small cities all over the country, are fully justified by existing conditions.

Request by Chief of Police Bates that observers of any un-American activities report to him at once accords with the proclamation issued by President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon, involving conduct of nationals of Germany, Italy and Japan and declaring that all Nazi subjects 14 years of age and older within the United States shall be considered alien enemies—the same applying to Japanese and citizens of Italy.

Whatever plans are developed in Mansfield for civilian defense, under direction of Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch as committee chairman, will undoubtedly be given full official and public co-operation, as it is in this way that the entire defense set-up for the nation is to be accomplished.

New Citizens To Be Welcomed

THERE is an element of timeliness in the public recognition which is to be given tomorrow evening to the one hundred and fifty Mansfield and Richland county foreign-born residents who have recently been accorded the honor of being accepted into American citizenship.

This is a proud distinction which native-born Americans are sometimes inclined to disregard, or to accept as a matter of course, but which those who have come from other parts of the world are more likely to appreciate—particularly at a time when the native lands of many of them are torn by war and suffering at the hands of ruthless rulers.

In the inspirational surroundings of one of Mansfield's new Junior high schools—John Simpson—which symbolizes the equality of educational opportunities in the country of their adoption, these new citizens are to be privileged to hear an address by Ohio's Lieutenant Governor Paul M. Herbert and to become otherwise acquainted with the privileges and responsibilities of American citizens. The event is sponsored by the educational committee of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce.

Coming at a time when the United States is girding itself for battle to perpetuate the principles of individual liberty and human freedom, upon which it was founded, it is especially appropriate that more than ordinary care be taken to instill the fundamentals of true Americanism into these new citizens—keeping in mind that this is also only a few days removed from national observance of Bill of Rights day, which will be next Monday, December 15.

All-American Olympics Planned

ARGENTINA is to be host for the first Pan-American Olympic Games, now being planned for 1942, unless war prevents. The 21 independent nations of this hemisphere are co-operating on the project. Contests in winter sports will be held at Mendoza in the Andes next July. Because the seasons reverse our own, all the other contests will take place in Buenos Aires at the end of the Argentine spring, which is its loveliest season. They will begin November 21.

A committee here is selecting a team of 200 athletes to represent the United States. There will be competition in 25 different sports, including track and field, swimming, tennis, baseball, winter sports, polo, yachting, wrestling, fencing, shooting, rowing and cycling.

This may be a fine thing. It is expected to attract a throng of tourists to the scene and introduce a few thousand more North Americans to a very beautiful South American city about which they have been ignorant in the past. Buenos Aires, with a population of nearly 4,000,000, fine buildings and parks and world-renowned newspapers, will be a revelation to many of these visitors.

But our southern neighbors have never gone in much for this sort of thing and have not in the past produced Olympic winners. Will the purpose of the revived modern Olympic games—to create international good fellowship—be served if Uncle Sam's visiting athletes carry off all the honors?

This week is being nationally observed as Bible week—and readers of the selected verse printed on this page each day are reminded that the complete book is a perpetual "best seller."

Tip to Americans: They're having less mental trouble in England because their minds are all pointed one way. Unity and teamwork are great healers.

So live that when the first of a month arrives the bills that come in the mail are new ones.

There should be no striking now except at the enemy.

BY THE DAWN'S EARLY LIGHT

Analyst Explains Japan's Moves

—By JAMES R. YOUNG

Editor's Note—James Young, noted author and expert on Far Eastern affairs, was recalled to New York by International News Service immediately after his lecture in Mansfield Monday night. Following is the first of his articles touching on early phases of the Japanese war against the United States.

* * *

JAPANESE air raiders, and parachutists who might attempt a landing in California, probably would originate from airplane carriers accompanied by speedy submarines of the latest type and escorted by destroyer convoys.

Point of origin of this attacking squadron may be assumed to be Formosa, Japan's great Gibraltar of the Pacific, 500 miles north of the Philippines.

These units probably left their bases ten or 12 days ago. In fact, some are understood to have done their scouting job a month back, preparatory to the grand imperial headquarters war plan which only awaited the palace flash from Tokyo to proceed with carefully preordained formulae.

The two American supply transport ships reported sunk 1,300 miles and 700 miles off the Pacific coast were probably intercepted as the main body approached its hunting grounds for surprise attacks. If the main force does not appear in a few sunrises, sealed orders may take them to the Panama area.

Japan is using all of 50 submarines, with a reserve 30 to 50 in home waters, for attacks on likely American and British invaders who should shortly arrive in the Japanese zone for direct assaults on vulnerable cities, perhaps in liaison with Soviet airmen based in Siberia, only 700 miles from the emperor's capital.

Japan may be holding on to her capital ships but they are weaker than those of the democracies in fire power, armament, and maneuverability. They are granted an edge in speed, however.

I have seen some of Japan's air carriers on the southern China coast. Tokyo's admirals evidently have six between Formusa and the Philippines. I would judge three, operated out of the South Sea mandated islands for the destruction rained on Pearl Harbor and Honolulu, with three remaining close to home ports for North Pacific operations.

* * *

PARACHUTISTS reported near Honolulu, in Malaya and the Philippines substantiate reports several months back that the Nazis were drilling Japanese regiments, the first taking part against Chinese at Ichang, where they failed.

As one cognizant of the toughness of Japan's fighters ashore and afloat, and knowing their code of fatalism and religious fanaticism, coupled with an inbred hatred for occidentals, I warn every American in an area where parachutists are likely to land to beware of the trained and developed brutality, viciousness and arrogance of Japan's soldiers and sailors.

General Iwane Matsui, commander of Japan's forces at the infamous assault on Nanking's residents, described his men in hand combat as "wild mountain beasts, with claws of iron and weapons of steel." From personal observation, these men are ferocious, ready to use hatchets, knives and even gas.

JAPAN seeks to knock out the American and British naval power in the Pacific before Russia attacks her from Siberia. Some Japanese are cognizant of Japan's vulnerability, hence the use of surprise strategy.

Japan will attempt landing parties at Singapore, Manila, Honolulu, and even Mexican ports. Her well-drilled and fearless troops, in coordination with a naval personnel that does not reckon the danger of long overseas attacks, will set fires anywhere they can drop incendiaries.

Japan's attacks in the Pacific from Pearl Harbor to Bangkok by way of Cavite follow plans worked out in military and naval staff colleges since 1935. Concrete evidence that war seemed inevitable appeared a few weeks ago.

Placing the Blame.

Timely Editorial

Stop It Now.

Defense is going to cost this country plenty without the added lug of lobbying and contract fees to outsiders and without the further superimposed charges of racketeering, waste and excessive profits in any direction.

Current revelations on these various matters are filled with bad odors. Capping the recently filed suit of a former Democratic member of congress from Ohio for $687,000 as a lobbying fee on a single contract is the present disclosure of fees amounting to more than $189,000 which subcontractors agreed to pay a New York broker for his "services."

Fortunately congress is being aroused and is bringing out the facts through investigating committees of both senate and house. The evidence is not confined to lobbyist and broker fees, but has thrown light upon abuses in actual defense construction.

The lid has been only tilted. But a mere start has been made in uncovering waste, mismanagement and worse.—Kansas City Times.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"To Spill the Beans."

Spilling the beans is spoiling things—and it has meant exactly that since back among the ancients.

The colloquialism harks back to a custom at elections in Greece of old.

Beans would be used for ballots, and they were deposited in a helmet.

If the holder of the helmet dropped it, or if it fell, or if in some other way the beans were spilt,—it made a lot of trouble.

It still does.

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Your Faith In Me.

You who have always so believed
In me, that I was right
How much I owe you. My success
Is built upon the might

Of this belief you hold. I could
Not have gone very far
If you had never said I could
My dreams hitch to a star.

It was your faith in me that gave
Me courage and I know
How much of this success is yours
How much to you I owe.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Kurusu Tipped Hand By His Fury At Red, White and Blue Insignia

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The U. S. armed forces might have had a valuable tip regarding Special Envoy Saburo Kurusu's actual "peace" intentions if they had interviewed employes of the fashionable Royal Hawaiian hotel in Honolulu.

Kurusu made a one-night stop-over in Honolulu during his clipper flight from Tokyo to Washington, and the first thing he did after being shown to his suite was to pick up the telephone and ask for "Room Service."

"Please have several pairs of pajamas from one of the shops downstairs sent to my room at once," he ordered.

A few minutes later a bellhop brought up six pairs of pajamas of assorted hues. Kurusu examined them briefly, chose a bright-colored silk pair. The bellhop took the others away, but had hardly stepped out of the elevator when the desk clerk hailed him.

"Go right back to Mr. Kurusu's room," the clerk directed. "Something's happened. He sounded very excited."

The bellboy rushed back to find the eminent Japanese visitor boiling mad. Holding up the pajamas, he pointed to a red-white-and-blue insignia woven on the pocket. Flinging the pajamas at the bellhop, he commanded:

"Take them back! Take them back at once and tell that store I've decided I don't want any of their merchandise."

Who Was Asleep?

ALIBIS cannot very well explain away how both army and navy intelligence had their guard down so carelessly when Japanese planes swooped down out of the early morning sky at Hawaii on Sunday.

Their only explanation so far is that the Pacific is a very wide ocean. However, U. S. naval intelligence at least is supposed to keep a careful eye on when Japanese warships leave port and notify U. S. naval stations in the Pacific to watch out for them.

In recent years, however, both intelligence services have been under the command of drawing-room experts. General Sherman Miles, in charge of military intelligence, is a charming gentleman who has surrounded himself with wealthy young blue-bloods. Only members of the best families can qualify for military intelligence, and how much they know about the life around a Japanese waterfront is questionable.

Similarly, naval intelligence has been in charge of two delightful gentlemen, Captain Alan Kirk and now Captain Ted Wilkinson. Both have their names listed in the Social Register, the blue-blood list of Washington's selected socialites. Wilkinson has a large mansion across the Potomac in Virginia, and there he entertains in the very best manner, but when it came to docking the U. S. S. Mississippi in New York it took him six and a half hours.

Captains Kirk and Wilkinson are great assets at dinner parties, and apparently want all their young men to be likewise, for no man can get into naval intelligence unless both grandfathers and grandmothers were born in the U. S. A. Not even Wendell Willkie could qualify.

Obviously it is the man who can speak a few languages, is not afraid to get his hands dirty in close contact with life, and who is not too particular regarding the percentage of blue blood in his veins, who should be able to bring in shipping information.

* * *

Mrs. Roosevelt's Reaction.

MRS. ROOSEVELT is one of the most even-tempered, good-natured persons in the world. But no one in Washington was more irate than she when the news first broke that Japan had sprung a Hitler double-cross on Hawaii during the middle of her husband's appeal to Emperor Hirohito.

On the fateful Sunday of the bombardment, Mrs. Roosevelt came into the White House while the president was talking to the Japanese ambassador. She said nothing at the time, but her lips tightened into a firm straight line—sure sign that the First Lady's dander is up.

Afterward, she told friends:

"Imagine the nerve of that man sitting with my husband in the White House when Japanese bombs were falling on our boys! And when I came in he got up and actually bowed and was full of smiles!"

* * *

No-Appeaser Ickes.

THE one member of the cabinet who had a consistently 100 per cent, though sometimes unpopular, batting record regarding Japan was the toe-stepping, hit-'em-harder Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes.

No one outside the cabinet ever knew just how many tough fights Ickes had with Secretary of State Hull over appeasing Japan. For a time it got so that Hull would not speak to him.

Ickes argued way back in 1937, when Japan first invaded China, that the United States should cooperate with Britain in shutting off Japan's oil and the raw materials of war. And he kept plugging this theme and getting into the hair of the state department with unremitting zeal ever since.

He brought the matter up again in 1938 when the Japanese sank the U. S. gunboat Panay, obviously a test by the war lords to see whether the United States would take it lying down.

Then, in 1940, Ickes joined with Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox in trying to persuade the president to embargo all oil, gasoline and scrap iron. Once again Secretary Hull opposed, and persuaded the president to delay the oil embargo until almost a year later, by which time Japan had built up a year's reserve of oil—which she has today.

Meanwhile, the state department got so sore at Ickes that they actually started a bureau of their own regarding the islands of the Caribbean, competing with Ickes' division of Territories and Insular Affairs. In fact, the state department almost hired as chief of this division the governor of the Virgin Islands whom Ickes had fired.

* * *

America First.

A FAIR analogy can be drawn between the gentlemen of the state department and the America First committee which is now disbanding. Both were sincere, and definitely felt that the best way to treat the dictators was to give them more room to expand. Once Japan had taken a part of China, they felt, she would be satisfied; and once Hitler had taken Austria and the Sudetenland, he also would be satisfied.

Apparently they had their heads too far in the clouds or did not understand human nature sufficiently to realize that the thirst of a dictator never is quenched. It was this blind policy which opened the nation to attack when its guard was down.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I took the opening of the opera season with a highball and pipe—that is to say, from the depths of an armchair near an open fire that was some nine and a half miles from the Golden Horseshoe, where 4,000 of the faithful gathered.

As the "Marriage of Figaro" unfolded at the Met, I thumbed through a new and delightful book called "The Opera," by Wallace Brockway and Herbert Weinstock, and turned up little nuggets of fact so interesting that after awhile I got up and got pad and pencil and made notes on the things I found.

It may be that you are familiar with all these things that I am about to pass along; it was news to me, and so I'm afraid you're going to have to sit still or turn to your favorite comic strip.

* * *

I LEARNED, for instance, that Pope Clement IX was once the most popular librettist of his time . . . that among American composers of opera was a signer of the Declaration of Independence (Francis Hopkinson) . . . That "Aida" has been performed more often than any other single opera in America (301 times) . . . That an opera once caused a revolution in Belgium ("La Muette de Portici") . . . That in 1920 a 200-year-old opera began a run in London that lasted for 2 and a half years (The Beggar's Opera) . . . That a great philosopher once composed an extremely popular opera (Rousseau) . . . That one of the greatest of operatic composers was a chemistry professor who wrote opera only in his spare time (Borodin—"Igor") . . . That Farinelli, the great singer, was something like some of our bungry actors, who accept week-end invitations and stay three years . . . Farinelli went to Spain for a few personal appearances and stayed 25 years . . . He remained at the bidding of Philip V, King of Spain, who was hen-pecked and found escape from his nagging wife in Farinelli's singing.

* * *

THERE is much more, but I am not going to do your digging for you. I was interested in this inaugural of Mozart because Rise Stevens, next to Ezio Pinza, had the most to contribute vocally, and as she as been swimming in Hollywood pools and making pictures between excusions to Malibu beach I was wondering what the oracles would say of her contribution. I knew before Panizza lifted his baton that in Miss Stevens' dressing room was a miniature French poodle, aged nine and a half months, the gift of Nelson Eddy, her co-partner in the new film "The Chocolate Soldier." I knew, too, that at least twice in her life this young woman had turned down invitations to sign contracts with the Met because she felt she wasn't quite ready. This is real evidence of character. So I, among others, watch the progress of Rise (she sang the role of Cherubino) with interest and admiration.

Her notices were good. The critics agreed that her performance was "seasoned and expert." They said that her "Voi Che Sapete" "was, indeed, sung beautifully." . . . Seasoned, expert, sung beautifully.

I will leave Miss Stevens with these plums and her French poodle and say that the opera, on the air at the Met, or between the covers of a good book is rich, good fun. Now that the season's on, little old New York is more like New York than ever.

A Farmer's Diary

A Reason for Being

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I TALKED to an old friend who has been very ill. He is now just a shadow of his former self. His cheeks are thin and sallow, his bones protrude, his hair is almost entirely gray—he totters when he walks. And yet he is a happy man, and our meeting was an inspiration to me.

"Tell me what has happened to you," said I.

"Last year, on a vacant piece of ground right near my home, I developed a rose that is hardy, blooms seven months of the year, and is so fragrant that a single clump will perfume the whole garden. I worked on fragrances of violets, too—and perfected a new kind of hollyhock. To me the memory of sweet odors is equally inspiring as the sound of a pleasant voice, a lovely landscape or the stir of life in a newborn child. I have so many ideas—so many things I plan to do before I am too old."

"But why are you so thin and pale?" I asked again.

"I forgot I hadn't told you... I've been in the hospital ten weeks. At first the surgeon said he thought the operation would be almost hopeless—but he'd do the best he could. I told him I didn't dare die yet — I had too many really worthwhile things to do. When death was near, I thought hard of my flowers. I promised the Giver of all life to use mine to make this world a better place—and then I passed the crisis and got better fast."

I looked at him searchingly. He returned my gaze, and laughed. In that frail physique, his spirit strode atop the world. I felt in him a completeness of satisfaction that was the acme of happiness.

"In another month, I'll be back on the job again," he said. "And I can hardly wait!" His face lighted up with an inward spontaneous delight.

"Don't try to go too fast," I cautioned him. "You may not be able to undertake too much."

"I'm gaining steadily," he answered quickly. "And I've never been so happy—nor so sure of myself. You'll see—I'll perfect, from the humblest flowers, such odors as the world has never known."

Santa and the WHITE ROSE

by Sigrid Arne

The Story So Far: Carl, a peasant's son, has arrived at King Harald's court to compete with the best bowmen. He is a magic boy created by Santa Claus from half a white rose.

CHAPTER NINE.

CARL WINS, IS HONORED BY THE KING.

THERE were 50 who had come to compete in King Harald's tournament. Carl was youngest of all. The King himself told them what the tests would be. He stood under a red and white canopy on the field and asked the contestants to pass by him.

"This lad," said the King when Carl stepped in front of him, "How old are you?"

"Sixteen, Sire," said Carl and he said it so bravely the King smiled and said, "Good luck, lad."

"Now then," said the King, "you who have come here to compete must pass three tests. First you will shoot at the target down the field 300 paces.

"Those who hit the bull's eye will next shoot through a golden bracelet hung by a silevr thread. And those who can do that will be asked to hit a white ball thrown high into the air. The men who succeed in all three tests will be known as the best bowmen of the kingdom."

When he finished the crowd shouted with excitement. The contestants formed a line. Carl was tenth from the last. He stood between an old mountaineer who was a famous hunter and a sailor who said he could shoot sea-gulls on the wing. Carl said nothing, but he carefully fitted his arrow in the bow for the first test.

* * *

EACH man shot in turn. When the test was over there were ten arrows in the bull's ele. Carl's arrow was one of them. So Carl and the nine other winners stepped into a new line. A King's guardsman led them to a tall oak tree on the lawn. There hung the gold bracelet on a silver thread, turning slowly in the breeze. Carl was the last to shoot this time. Two others had put their arrows neatly through the golden circle.

Carl fitted his arrow carefully, watched the bracelet curve into position and then shot. His arrow sped straight through. There was a great shout from the crowds.

Then Carl and the two others who had passed the second test stepped out into the center of the field. The King's guard told them to watch carefully as he tossed the ball into the air.

Carl and the two others fitted their arrows into place. The guard threw the ball spun high into the sunlight and all three contestants let their arrows go at once. They watched breathlessly as one arrow struck the ball. Then they all ran to see which arrow had stuck. It was Carl's.

The King was so pleased that he walked out across the field to invite Carl to sit on his right at the banquet which was ready. There was entertainment as they ate but one old man brought the most applause.

* * *

HE had come to watch the tournament. As the dinner progressed he steppel to the King's table and asked if he might reach into a hugh bowl of grapes just in front of the King.

The King agreed and the old man reached into the fruit and brought out a small tin man which looked like one of the King's guard. There was a ripple of applause down the tables. The old man turned a screw in the toy soldier's back and set him on the table.

The little tin man walked stiffly down the table-cloth. As everyone watched the toy the old man slipped to the Kin's side and put something in his pocket. Then he disappeared in the crowd. You can guess who the old man was, and tomorrow I'll tell you what he put in the King's pocket.

TOMORROW: King Harald's magic pipe.

One arrow struck the ball.

WOMAN ARCHAEOLOGIST HEADS EXPEDITION INTO THE JUNGLE

(By International News Service)

LA CRESCENTA, Cal.—A small blond woman archeologist and aviatrix has left this quiet hillside town to lead an expedition deep into the jungles of Central America on a mission whose only reward so far has been oblivion.

She is petite Mrs. Karena Shields, who looks more like a young society woman than an explorer who nonchantly puts her life in pawn.

She has gone in search of a jungle mystery race of Mayan giants whose secrets, she believes, may give the answer to the lost island of Atlantis and provide explanations for a number of questions that long have baffled ethnologists.

Talking of her expedition before her departure, Mrs. Shields said the region she planned to explore was a "forbidden territory" from which no white person had ever returned to tell the tale. She said that five exploration parties which went into the district disappeared without a trace. Not the slightest clue as to the fate they met was ever found.

From what she has been able to learn of the jungle people she seeks, their civilization goes back for 4,000 years or more. They practice weird and horrible religious rites and still use an ancient system to hieroglyphic writing. They jealously guard the secrets of both their religious rites and their hieroglyphics.

The "forbidden territory" was described by Mrs. Shields as being about a week's trek into the jungle from Palenque, on the Guatemalan border, where she spent her girlhood on a plantation.

The feminine explorer hopes to succeed where others have failed by capitalizing on her blondness. She plans to become something of a "white goddess" of the jungle who will awe the Mayans with her fair hair, blue eyes and white skin.

She said she believed it would work. And then again, she conceded, she may end up as a human sacrifice on an ancient altar.

SAN FRANCISCO BLACKED OUT 57 MINUTES

knots of men and women hugged the walls and doorways of buildings and peered into the moon-streaked sky.

There was no excessive excitement in the great city by the Golden Gate.

But the reaction was different in Sacramento where the International News Service bureau and state officials reported a flood of telephone calls. The greatly excited citizens said they had heard a radio announcing that San Francisco had been bombed.

For a ten-minute period during San Francisco's blackout, giant army searchlights on the city's seven hills poked their fingers of light into the clouds over the entrance to the bay and slowly moved out to sea.

The federal prison on Alcatraz Island, in the middle San Francisco Bay, was dark during today's blackout in contrast to Monday night when it gleamed like a jewel during the darkened period.

San Francisco's adjacent sister cities across the bay—Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda—lay like patches of black velvet along the gently sloping hillsides.

All along the Pacific coast military forces swung into place to repel anticipated attacks by sea and air as reports filtered in of continued hard fighting in the Philippine Islands.

The long western coastline, from Alaska to Mexico, was on the alert with the armed services and citizenry working energetically in anticipation of hostile action at any point at any time. Blacked out during the entire night were the coast's three vital naval points, the Mare Island yard in San Francisco Bay, Los Angeles harbor and Puget Sound at Seattle.

New York Has Third Air Raid Alarm

NEW YORK—(INS)—New York had its third air raid alarm of the war at 8.35 a. m, today the all-clear sounding 26 minutes later.

There was smooth co-ordination in operation of police and fire-fighting forces Police radio cruisers sped through the city on prearranged routes with sirens shrieking while fire engines performed a like service.

This latest alarm found New York in a more war-conscious mood than had the two previous warnings yesterday which went practically disregarded by the populace.

Overnight, many offices had effected blackout aids, including the painting of windows with lampblack and the hanging of dark curtains.

There was no early indication—nor explanation—of what prompted the alarm, but officials yesterday emphasized the vital necessity of prompt cooperation by the civilian population in making the alarms effective.

Police would say only that they received the alarm signal and promptly put their planned procedure into operation.

The arrests were those of George C Rind, 46, and Alois V. Lieb, 54.

MAYOR STRIKES N-J REPORTER AT CITY HALL

Locke Hits Newsman In Face, Breaks His Glasses In Tiff Today.

Earlier, during an interview with Murray, Locke had removed his coat and threatened to "beat up" Murray, the latter said. Murray said he had replied that the mayor was too old a man for him to fight, and that Locke resumed his chair, from which he had risen, and put his coat on.

Locke also said during the course of the interview that he hence forth would not reveal any information to Murray, concerning city business. Murray said he had taken the stand that he was entitled to inquire about city activities.

The mayor countered with the charge that he was continually "misquoted" and told Murray to "stop bothering" him by calling at the office in person or on the telephone.

However, in his later conversation with The News-Journal, Locke said he had no intention of barring Murray from his office "so long as he acted like a gentleman."

He reiterated his statement that Murray had continually "misquoted" him, but otherwise "I've always gotten along with Bill (Murray) all right."

Immediately after ousting Murray from his office, the mayor called in Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr., and Police Chief Bates.

Ward told The News-Journal that Locke had recounted the incident to him and asked whether he "should do anything about it." Ward said the mayor told him there had been no witnesses.

Ward advised the mayor, he said, that regardless of that he thought "the mayor would be smart to let the matter go."

Murray's account of how he was ousted from the office and struck is as follows:

Becoming angry during the interview—after previously whipping off his coat and threatening to "beat up" Murray, the mayor said "You'd better get out before I have you put out."

Murray reminded him that the city building was a public place, but when the mayor refused to answer further questions, started to leave slowly.

As he reached the door, which he had partially opened, the mayor rushed up and started to push Murray.

Murray, with his back to Locke, braced himself.

Then he felt a blow on the right side of his face. His glasses fell to the floor and broke.

At this point the mayor said to Miss Thompson, "You saw him. He hit me first."

"You know I didn't hit you at all," Murray answered.

The questions that caused Locke to lose his temper concerned a reported second meeting of officials who will handle civilian defense. Murray had heard reports from council members that another meeting on this matter was being arranged, but weren't sure whether it was to be held tonight or tomorrow night. The mayor took the stand that he knew of no such meeting.

Yesterday, Locke hung up the telephone receiver in the midst of a conversation with Murray concerning Monday night's "secret meeting" of council, police and defense officials.

The meeting was held behind drawn window blinds, with a police officer on guard, much to the annoyance of some members of council and to others who attended the meeting.

Council received a request from the mayor for an investigation into the cost of safeguarding vital city property, and heard Police Chief Meade K. Bates outline police precautions. Bates had often outlined his plans publicly in the past.

Wants Recipe For Poor Man's Fruit Cake

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

It's all of ten years ago that I got one of your recipes for Poor Man's Fruit Cake. I remember it was made without butter, eggs or expensive ingredients. Still it was very good. My son, who was then 11 years of age, enjoyed it, but I haven't made one for some time, and have completely forgotten the recipe. I think I'd like to surprise him by sending one to him at camp. Will you please publish the recipe in your column? SOLDIER'S MOTHER.

So sorry but space in this column is at such a premium that I cannot publish the recipe for Poor Man's Fruit Cake. However, I will be glad to send it to you or anyone else who would like to make one for a boy in camp or for home consumption. The original recipe cost about ten cents per pound, but the increased cost of everything at the present time, it may cost a penny or two more. Be sure to enclose a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a married woman in my early thirties, and have four lovely children. My husband went out for a number of good times in our first years of married life, but lately it's becoming a habit, and he goes out with younger boys who can afford to be seen with girls. I always keep up my appearance, even though I have very little to select from, while my husband says he's entitled to a good time, as he makes the money and provides for the family.

The girls have become so bold that they call him up. I'm sure they dress well and haven't household duties to take up their time. I could go out the same as he does, but I'll never hurt my children by becoming involved in an affair. My husband has a responsible position and can't afford to be mixed up in a scandal.

He loves us, but also loves the attention the younger girls give him. Well and good, I like my husband to be popular, but why should I always have to sit at home while he has a good time? Do you think I ought to go out and get a position too? M. M. D.

Sorry I can't print all of your letter. However, please let me say that a woman who has to beg for every nickel, as you tell me, and has a philandering husband in the bargain, strikes me as a good deal of a domestic martyr. It would be an excellent thing if you could get a position that would enable you to be a little more independent. But, of course, this would be the last thing I'd suggest, if you haven't some absolutely trustworthy person with whom to leave the children. Before taking any decisive step, consider this well.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a young man of 22 and in love with a girl two years older than I am. We've been going together for four years. Everything was going along swell until I mentioned marriage. That seemed to change everything. She told me to go out and find myself a younger girl, one I could really love, and not to bother with her any more.

I tried to get an explanation, but she would say nothing. These last few days have been like a dream; I don't know which way to turn. Will you please help me? I think a great deal of her.

DICK.

Judging from letters which come to me, girls act this way very often. They tell the boy friend to stay away, and when he does, they change their minds and discover he is the one and only. You might see how this works. Stay away a while.

Then, again, she may really be in earnest. Perhaps she doesn't want to marry a man younger than she is; she may think you're not in a position to marry; she may care for someone else—there may be innumerable reasons why she doesn't want to be serious with you. Again, she may be temporarily "fed up" and wants to be alone for a while. Whatever it is, a little absent treatment is the best way of finding out.

Go out with other girls and enjoy yourself.

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

If you need a new apron in a hurry, perhaps for that big holiday dinner you're planning—here's one you can stitch up very speedily. Pattern 9919 by Marian Martin is cut in only three main sections for quick and easy sewing. The bodice sections in back lap over to form shoulder straps in front, and also points at the front waistline. They look stunning when made of contrast fabric with a matching pocket (or two)! For trimming you might use perky ric-rac and buttons on the bodice. This apron slips comfortably over your head and ties in back. Stitch it up now with the aid of the Sew Chart in some gay cotton print!

Pattern 9919 may be ordered only in sizes small (32-34), medium (36-38) and large (40-42). Small size, view A, requires 2⅛ yards 35 inch fabric; view B, 1½ yards 35 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrast.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian's glad cry and her husband's picturesque expletive sounded together in answer to my proposal, and then Lillian sprang up and kissed me.

"The very thing!" she said. "You won't have to appear in it at all."

"You're not thinking," her husband said, and she looked at him wide-eyed.

"What do you mean?" she queried.

"Simply this," he countered. "How is it going to look to the chief if we calmly propose for you in that restaurant stunt? No, no, girl! We'll have to say that Madge proposed it to us, and was anxious to do it, but was afraid he would object, and that we volunteered to ask him about it."

Leaves It to Harry.

"Oh, of course! How stupid of me!" Lillian said in swift self-accusation. "And one thing's certain. I'm going to leave the telling in your hands, Harry. I'd be sure to bungle it. I'm just not hitting on all cylinders these days."

"You're doing all right," her husband said, smiling at her. "But I'll volunteer to butter up the chief. He'll be apt to humor me, I imagine, to make up for my having to lie doggo here."

Lillian and I exchanged surreptitious glances. If what we suspected of my father's pact with the surgeon were true, the "chief" indeed would be "apt to humor" Harry in anything which would keep him from realizing that there was no real necessity for the inaction upon which Dr. Twitchell had insisted.

"It would be a good thing if you were out of reach when I broach this to the chief," Harry went on.

Going to the Lansfield.

"I shall be just that very shortly," I said. "Father wishes me to go over to the Lansfield and do various things for him. I'm only waiting until Miss Whitlock says I can be spared here, and until my father provides a car for me. He will not permit me to travel afoot or by taxi."

"I should think not," Harry said, "after what happened here this morning. Although, at that, I don't think they're aiming at you just now. It's Lillian they're after."

"And it's Lillian they won't get," I told myself silently, with a cold resolution upon me to find some way of protecting my friend from the gangsters of the restaurant, who were so determined to get hold of her. But aloud I only commented: "She's safe now, at any rate," followed with a query:

"Will it be all right with you if I leave here for the Lansfield as soon as Father provides a car for me after Miss Whitlock returns?"

"Of course, dear girl," Lillian said hastily. "I'm perfectly all right now, although I'm not denying I'd like you here beside me until the nurse gets back."

"There's no chance of your losing me until then," I told her warmly.

"When will you be back?" she asked wistfully, and Harry added an insistent, "Make it as soon as possible."

"I shall do just that," I told them warmly. "Do you want me to stay here tonight?"

"If that isn't the last word in absurd questions!" Lillian exclaimed. "You know that I want you with me every minute you can give me. You can't imagine what having you here means to me just now."

Her voice faltered, and I saw that she was near to tears. Purposely, I struck a flippant note.

"Then," I said, "I shall move in this afternoon, bag and baggage, prepared to make you twice glad—or sorry."

"It's you who probably will be sorry," Harry Underwood struck in, echoing my flippancy, "by the time old Halloran gets through turning you into Lil's image."

"I shall love it," I said truthfully, "if only Father consents to my doing it."

"That's on the lap of the gods," Harry said, "but I'll do my d—dest to pull the trick."

Nurse and Spencer Arrive.

"Hush!" Lillian said softly, and we fell silent as we heard footsteps coming along the corridor. The next second Miss Whitlock pushed open the door and my father followed her into the room. The nurse went directly to her patient, put her fingers on his pulse and looked critically at him.

'Have you moved any muscles?" she queried sharply.

"Only those of my tongue," he retorted flippantly. "They've been going plenty, but you said I could talk."

"I didn't tell you to overdo it," she said a bit tartly. "Now you close your eyes for awhile and keep quiet."

"But I've got to talk to the chief before he goes," her patient said rebelliously.

Idleness Makes Women Fade Early

By MME. QUI VIVE

She lived at a swanky hotel. She had money to throw to the commercial birds who sell lovely gowns and those that run you through the beauty hopper. Her coiffure was perfect, her hands soft and white, her feet expensively shod. But her eyes were dull, her face carried an expression of boredom, her movements were listless.

"You can't read all the time, or go to movies," she said. "And what else is there to do?"

Her two listeners were women who work like demons. They not only hold down jobs, but they do a lot of community work in the small town in which they live. They look after their homes besides, though they have help with the household chores. They looked at each other in amazement. What is there to do? The world is in need of helping hands. There's work aplenty for everybody.

There is nothing drearier, less inspiring than idleness. There is nothing that so lays on the spiritual mildew as self-indulgence. Unless a woman feels that she is of some use to somebody, necessary to somebody, if she is giving nothing of her strength and spirit each day, she is of little account to herself.

It is a grand thing to go to bed at night and to be able to say "I have met my responsibilities. This day I have done all the things I set out to do. And more besides." If you've taken time to run in and see the invalid next door, that is to your credit. If you've written some cheerful letters to others who are burdened and worried, you have added another good deed. If you're a real guy, you take these matters as a part of the day's job. You don't pat yourself on the back, but you do enjoy self-respect.

Activity is a law of life. Keep marching. Endeavor to become more and more capable and efficient. There is a satisfaction in doing things well, even if you are only darning a stocking.

Look around you some time when you drop into a family hotel. Many women who live in that manner have nothing but time and money, sometimes more of both than they need. They play bridge, they read a little. They aren't getting any place. One year is pretty much the same as another. The husbands come home to them; they eat in the restaurant. They choose that kind of an existence because they don't want to be bothered with the care of a home.

As for your beauty adviser, she'd rather have a three-room cottage, broil a steak, in her own kitchen range, wash up the dishes, sit before the hearth. At least, she'd have something to do, and she'd be making a home for herself and somebody else.

Lemon Snowballs.

3 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons water
Grated rind 1 lemon
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon all-phosphate baking powder

Beat yolks of eggs and sugar together until very light, add water, lemon juice and rind; next flour and baking powder sifted together. Beat whites of eggs till stiff, add them to the batter and fold in as gently as possible. Crease small cups, put heaping tablespoon of batter in each, and steam or boil for half an hour. Turn out, roll in powdered sugar, and serve with lemon or foamy sauce.

Lemon Cream Sauce.

½ cup butter, creamed
1¼ cups powdered sugar
Rind 1 lemon
4 tablespoons lemon juice
Nutmeg

Cream butter, add powdered sugar gradually, creaming it in gradually, then add a little nutmeg and the grated rind and juice of lemon. Just before serving put over boiling water for a few moments.

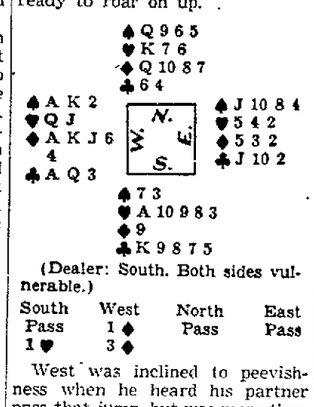
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THEY DON'T DO IT NOW

IN THE early days of contract there were many original bids of 3-No Trumps, also many more original bids which were forcing all the way to game. Fine players seldom make such bids nowadays, mainly because they have learned one very simple lesson. A lot of fine cards bunched in one hand can shrink terrifically in trick-taking value unless there is at least a little strength opposite them. So the best players like to go slow until they hear something from their partners. Then they are ready to roar on up.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	Pass
1 ♥	3 ♦

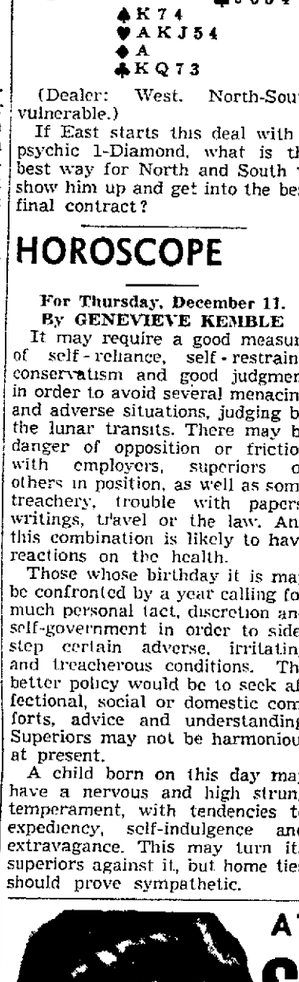
West was inclined to peevishness when he heard his partner pass that jump, but was more than pleased later. He lost one trick in spades, two in hearts, two in diamonds and one in clubs, and took only seven himself, being down two. At another table of the same duplicate, East answered the opening 1-Diamond with 1-No Trump and West hopped at once into 3-No Trumps. That was set four tricks.

Just take a good look at West's mighty array of high cards. By the usual honor trick counting he had practically six capital tricks. By the old 4-3-2-1 count, he had 24, enough and to spare for the old original 3-No Trumps if all suits had been stopped. In contract's swaddling days, plenty of players made opening forcing bids of two on hands no stronger than that one.

It has been well learned by most high rank players that your hand must be judged from the standpoint of the tricks it can take opposite a blank partner, when you consider committing the pair to a game. From that measure, this hand does not come within a mile of being a game-guaranteeing holding.

* * *

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

If East starts this deal with a psychic 1-Diamond, what is the best way for North and South to show him up and get into the best final contract?

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, December 11.
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

It may require a good measure of self-reliance, self-restraint, conservatism and good judgment in order to avoid several menacing and adverse situations, judging by the lunar transits. There may be danger of opposition or friction with employers, superiors or others in position, as well as some treachery, trouble with papers, writings, travel or the law. And this combination is likely to have reactions on the health.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year calling for much personal tact, discretion and self-government in order to sidestep certain adverse, irritating and treacherous conditions. The better policy would be to seek affectional, social or domestic comforts, advice and understanding. Superiors may not be harmonious at present.

A child born on this day may have a nervous and high strung temperament, with tendencies to expediency, self-indulgence and extravagance. This may turn its superiors against it, but home ties should prove sympathetic.

DRAFT BOARDS TOLD SYSTEM NOT CHANGED

Richland Headquarters Told Operations To Be Same Till Laws Are Changed.

Richland county draft boards were informed today by state selective service headquarters that they will continue to operate as before until President Roosevelt or congress changes the existing draft laws.

"The processes and elements of the selective service system are not affected, or changed in any detail, as a result of an existing state of war, the bulletin said.

"Any changes which may be made in the act by congress, or in the rules or regulations as authorized by the President, will be immediately transmitted to you," it said.

The county's three boards have no call for men now and clerks consider it unlikely that they will send any to induction stations this month unless there is an emergency call within a few days.

Col. C. W. Goble, head of the state draft set-up, explained that men who have been discharged from the army for any reason are not subject to re-call without first being inducted by local boards or enlisting.

Men who have been transfered to the Enlisted Reserve corps for any reason are still under the jurisdiction of the army, however, and may be ordered back at any time, Col. Goble said.

THEATERS

Held Over.

"Keep 'Em Flying," the Bud Abbott-Lou Costello comedy, continues at the Ohio through Friday after being held over by popular demand. Featuring Martha Raye, Carol Bruce, William Gargan and Dick Foran the picture gives Miss Raye, the singing commedienne, her first dual role. She plays the Phelps twins, U. S. O. hostesses. As the girl friend of roly-poly Costello she is seen as the dumb clinging vine, while as Bud Abbott's fiancee she portrays a noisy, rambunctious personality with a flare for getting her man. She carries much of the comedy and introduces several singing numbers.

Array of Stars.

Boasting a cast of radio stars and comics headed by Frances Langford and Ken Murray, "Swing It Soldier," opens today at the Madison. Brenda and Cobina are featured, also Don Wilson, jovial announcer of the Jack Benny program, Hanley Stafford and "Senor Lee." Miss Langford plays the double role of a singing star and her twin sister, whom Murray confuses throughout most of the picture. In his efforts to help one girl in her career he almost spoils the chances of both. "Burma Convoy," a dramatic picture on a timely theme, is the co-feature. Charles Bickford plays the lead.

* * *

Aerial Thriller.

"Flying Blind," an aerial thriller with Richard Arlen Jean Parker and Roger Pryor, is playing at the Ritz on the same bill with "Highway West," featuring Brenda Marshall and Slim Summerville. "Man Power," with Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich and George Raft starts Wednesday.

* * *

Spy Melodrama.

"Blackout," a new spy melodrama set in present day London, opens today at the Park. Unreeling a swiftly moving tale of espionage and counter-espionage the picture has its action on a Danish freighter halted in the English Channel by a British patrol ship seeking contraband. Conrad Veidt plays the ship captain and Valerie Hobson the spy. Others in the cast are Esmond Knight and Hay Petrie. "Two In a Taxi," is the second attraction.

* * *

Riotous Comedy.

"The Bride Came C. O. D." starring Bette Davis and James Cagney starts Wednesday at the Majestic. Telling the amusing story of a spoiled debutante with more dollars than sense and of a commercial aviator with just the opposite assets the picture also features Stuart Erwin, Eugene Pallette and Edward Brophy. "Maryland," a Technicolor production with Fay Bainter, Walter Brennan, John Payne and Brenda Joyce is the second attraction.

Miss Whitelaw's great-great-grandfather purchased the south half of the town from Dr. Witherspoon, first president of Princton College.

FIREMEN WILL FORM DEFENSE NUCLEUS HERE

24 Receive Certificates For Fire Rescue and First Aid Training Today.

Thirty-four members of the Mansfield fire department receiving certificates for completing a ten-week fire rescue and first aid training today at 3:30 p. m., will be used as the nucleus of a civilian defense training program, Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the Mansfield civilian defense committee, announced today.

Kalbfleisch, who will present Red Cross certificates to the firemen, said that volunteer workers would be enlisted in the near future for similar courses.

The firemen have been taking daily instruction at the Central fire station under the direction of Bernard Hardy, Red Cross first aid instructor.

The civilian defense chairman announced that plans for the registration and development of a police and fire volunteer system would be made at a meeting of the defense committee on Friday night.

Enrollees in the courses would be taught the proper method of rescuing persons from wartime fires and first aid treatment of them under battling conditions.

Kalbfleisch intends to designate specific defense tasks to members of his committee so that the problem can be met more comprehensively.

Some form of questionnaire must be made out for the registration of workers and volunteer women for clerical work found. Kalbfleisch plans to have the primary registration at the Y. M. C. A. or the American Legion home.

Later district headquarters would be set up in firehouses or schools.

Following the training of fire and police volunteers, the civilian defense committee plans to train air raid wardens, auxiliary police, bomb squads, fire watchers, messengers, drivers, decontamination corps, demolition and clearance workers and road repair crews.

Postoffice Bans Visitors Under New Regulations

All visitors will be excluded from offices and workrooms of the Mansfield postoffice and its departments, in accordance with a statement issued from Washington by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Walter Myers, Postmaster Herman E. Homberger announced today.

Homberger said that the note from Myers asked him to "collaborate with the heads of government agencies in the building in providing employes with suitable identification so they may be readily identified by custodian watchmen."

He added that he had been directed to take such other precautionary measures which may be necessary to keep the property under surveillance at all times, and to afford it every protection possible.

About ten quarts of milk are required for a pound of butter.

Londoners Bid For Cats And Dogs As Pets

LONDON—(INS)—It has taken a war to force home on Londoners that it is very nice to have a cat or dog around the house.

Despite food rationing difficulties, dogs and cats are being enthusiastically bought up. Britain's kennels and pet stores are unable to cope with the ever-increasing demand.

At the outbreak of the widespread air raids, dog and cat owners, afraid of their animals being injured, rushed to have them destroyed.

Then with food rationing increasing, they once more hurried to get rid of them.

It was found, however, that only the rich, who were used to feeding their pets with expensive meats and tid-bits, found it difficult to keep them.

The poor people, who have always fed their household pets on scraps from the table, had no difficulty.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — Anyone who has the interests of American labor truly at heart must view with extreme regret any legislation which forces it to give up any of those rights which it has gained over a long period of years of sacrifice and strife. Anyone who has the interests of national defense truly at heart must view with extreme alarm the repeated stoppages of production of munitions at this time when munitions are probably the most vital element in the defense of our national existence.

Johnson

The rights of labor are a vital part of that national existence which we seek to defend by the production of munitions. It is this thought, I believe, which prompts those who sincerely have the interests of both labor and national defense at heart to accept for the emergency some sort of legislation to prevent stoppages of defense production due to labor disputes. The integration of these two vital interests in the defense picture presents a very difficult legislative problem and one that should be approached in a calm and judicial manner, with a full appreciation of the interests of the nation as a whole.

The Smith bill seems to have been passed by the house in a spurt of spleen rather than a spirit of reason. The high tempers engendered by the recent captive mine dispute and a state bordering on fear governed the house as well as a majority of the people last week. I believe this is to be primarily responsible for a hastily conceived, poorly drafted and poorly integrated omnibus bill.

Those provisions of the bill which are well designed to prevent unnecessary stoppages of defense production I believe are highly desirable and will be approved by the senate and the president. Those provisions which are ill-considered and un-enforceable will, I am confident, be struck from the bill by the senate or another bill will be reported out.

In any event, I am sure that some temperate but effective form of legislation, taking into full consideration both the hard-earned rights of labor and the necessity of protecting defense production, will be adopted.

It is unfortunate that the bill is backed by those considered to have anti-labor leanings. It would have been far better had such legislation been advanced by known friends of labor. Certainly there are many representatives among labor's friends, who might have proposed legislation to prevent unnecessary stoppages of defense production despite the onus which might be placed upon them by short-sighted labor leaders.

The bill itself is too involved and cumbersome for detailed discussion in a piece of this length. However, there are some things I would like to point out. That provision which creates mediation and arbitration machinery and that which provides for a 30-day cooling-off period are well thought out and highly desirable

Those portions which deal with sanctions and enforcement are ill-conceived and probably unenforceable. Certain provisions, such as those requiring the registration of unions and reporting of financial status, and those dealing with the secret ballot as a requisite to a strike call, are well-intentioned and desirable but in their present form are unacceptable.

That provision designed to freeze the open or closed shop is very ill-considered. It is probably based upon the Baker-Gompers agreement of 1917 which was workable because in that situation there was only one union group in the field. That condition does not exist today. This bill is not an agreement between the heads of the great unions and the president or the secretary of war, but a fiat which would prevent an employer from agreeing with his employes to a closed shop. In addition it would probably interfere with the highly desirable regional stabilization agreement which has done so much to prevent the very thing the bill seeks to eliminate.

On the whole, I feel less discouraged than many people by the action congress has taken in this matter.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

Ever since I attended the opening performance (or explosion, to be more exact), of "Sons o' Fun" I have been troubled by a recurring nightmare in which I am a property man at the Winter Garden. It is my duty to see that one thousand, seven hundred and ninety-eight props, ranging from a six-shooter to a trolley car, get on stage at the correct moment; that the cow falls from the heavens, the statue lights up, the papoose is handed to the Indian lady, the battleship sinks, the bathtub is carried out, and the man sitting up in the air gets his portable radio.

Kilgallen

In the middle of my nightmare things begin to go wrong. I hand Carmen Miranda a dead duck instead of a fan, Ella Logan goes on with a box of cigars instead of a blanket, the midgets get mixed up with the stooges and a well known member of cafe society is decapitated by accident in the decapitation scene in the upper box. The nightmare usually ends with the entire audience shooting off guns at Olsen and Johnson, who are lashed to the box office with thousand dollar bills. And I wake up screaming.

I am enchanted by those turbaned little dark-skinned fellows who serve the coffee at the Cotillion Room. They look like little characters out of the Arabian Nights, and I often wonder if the management keeps them in jarnieres during their off hours... This is no time of the year to be a grown-up. This is the time of year to walk wide-eyed through the toy departments, looking at dolls and airplanes and tigers that nod their heads. This is the time of year to sit down full of hope and yearning and dreams of singing angels, and write a letter to Santa.

Fascinating is the word for the trick hat Paula Laurence is showing off at the Ruban Bleu. It is made up of 25 hats, each fitting inside the other, and the total effect is incredible—akin to the sensation caused by La Miranda when she first appeared wearing a fruit plantation atop her noggin.

* * *

Have you noticed that the Stork Club now has those checked red tablecloths, a la Twenty One? And a set of green ones in the Club Room. Squire Billingsley says it not only cheers the place up, it saves laundry . . . I wonder what ever happened to Tallulah Bankhead's midget. And J. P. Morgan's? . . . For a giggle, read Gypsy Rose Lee's first venture into classy non-fiction; her piece entitled "Christmas On the Keith Family Circuit With Baby June and Her Pals" in the current Harper's Bazaar . . . I like Val Olman's smooth dance music at the Biltmore . . . A man from Mars alighting on Fifth Avenue any night this month and peering into the treasure-filled shop windows would certainly come to the quick conclusion that this land was peopled by luxury-loving millionaires who wore no ornaments that were not studded with emeralds or sapphires, no garments made of harsher stuff than pink chiffon or sable.

U. S. Moves to Use Its Giant Manpower

COUNTY SEEKS $90,000 WPA BRIDGE FUNDS

Engineer To Outline Project at Meeting Called By State For New Programs.

County Engineer Howard Sword will go to Columbus Thursday with a request for a $90,000 WPA program for the strengthening of bridges on Richland county roads which may be needed in the home defense program.

The proposed bridge project will supplant any other road and bridge construction the county may have in mind for 1942, the engineer said.

Sword plans to submit his proposal at a meeting at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Ohio State university with 40 county and city engineers from 20 central Ohio counties. The session was called by J. L. Kelley, manager of the central Ohio WPA district.

Also expected to attend the meeting are W. C. Statler, Mansfield city engineer, and Kenneth P. Shaffer, engineer for South Boulevards where a WPA sewer project is under way.

Statler could not be reached today for a statement concerning the city's plans to seek federal money for street or bridge projects next year.

Sword pointed out that at least 35 bridges on main county roads need strengthening to handle traffic that may be detoured over them in the event major highways are used by the army for transporting troops and war materials.

"A road is no better than its bridges, and we want to have the secondary roads ready for any emergency that may come," the engineer said.

He estimated that a $90,000 project should put the bridges in good condition for emergency use. The county probably would have to pay $20,000 or $25,000 toward the project, delaying its own proposed road work for a time, he said.

He added that the only definite 1942 plans the county road department has developed call for completion of work on the Koogle-Harlan and Lexington-Springmill roads. Work on them was started this year.

Kelley said the purpose of the session is to discuss WPA programs for the first six months of 1942. He added that WPA will offer the engineers some new ideas about planning and operations to help them in developing city and county sponsored federal aid work projects.

AAA SUED BY FARMERS HERE

Six Richland County Men Seek To Prohibit Collection of Wheat Penalty.

Six Richland county wheat farmers filed an action today in common pleas court to enjoin county and state AAA officials from collecting the 49-cent wheat penalty and enforcing the wheat marketing quotas.

It was the third suit filed in the state in recent weeks to test the legality of the federal government's farm program. Others were filed previously in Union and Stark counties.

Plaintiffs in the Richland county suit are Earl W. Logan, H. H. Fackler, Jacob W. Keifer, S. Jay Bloom, Foster Fackler, and W. L. Griebling. H. H. Fackler, who resides in Plymouth, is chairman of the county Wheat Marketing Protest association which has waged a campaign against the marketing quotas.

The farmer plaintiffs contend that the quotas and penalties were imposed illegally and were not made known to farmers until several months after this year's wheat crop was planted They also contend that a referendum on the quotas last May was conducted in the county by two AAA committeemen on the federal payroll and a third man chosen by them who was in favor of the quotas.

Hearing on the farmers' request for a temporary injunction against collection of the wheat penalty has been set for 2 p. m. Friday before Judge C. H. Huston in common pleas court.

The plaintiffs state in their petition that penalties totaling $944 have been assessed against them for "excess" wheat they produced this year and that the AAA requires them to pay that amount before they can market or feed the wheat.

Defendants named in the suit are Guy L. Taylor, county AAA chairman; George A. Mentzer, vice chairman; Howard C. Stone, committee member; Clem C. Till and L. B. Wilson, alternate members; Elmer F. Kruse, state chairman; Dale Williams, Dean Deeds, Christ Kainrad, and Guy Dowdy, state committeemen.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs are William Lemke, Fargo, N. D., former congressman from North Dakota, and L. M. Day of Chillicothe.

WAR MESSAGE HAS PRECEDENCE OVER OPERA, 500 HEAR BOTH

By ESTHER SMITH

President Roosevelt's first wartime broadcast from the White House last night took precedence over opera's first visit to Mansfield in two decades when the performance of "The Barber of Seville," was halted for a half-hour at Mansfield Senior high school to permit an audience of 500 music patrons the opportunity of hearing the president's message.

The second act intermission had been timed to fall at the hour set for the broadcast so that the audience might hear the president's first public utterance since the country entered into war with Japan. The audience listened silently, almost tensely, and then after a wave of applause relaxed to reenter into the spirit of the music and play.

Presented by the American Civic Opera company Rossini's comic opera with its amusing action and infectious music kept the local opera-goers in an expectant mood by its plots and counter-plots occasioned by the efforts of the "Count of Almaviva" to meet and woo the fair "Rosina," ward of "Don Bartolo," a crusty old guardian.

The company had a spontaneity that struck a responsive chord in the audience which generously supported the individual efforts of each of the half-dozen singers in this streamlined version of the Rosini work.

Taken as a whole, however, the music lovers attending the opera found the company disappointing as did many of the members of the sponsoring organization, the Mansfield Music Study club, which brought the opera here to raise money for the club scholarship fund and thereby enable young local musicians to further their study.

Directed by Reed Lawton, president of the American Civic Opera association, the performance was considerably enhanced by the work of a first rate 15-piece orchestra that well may take the credit for a large share of the success of the production.

Agata Borzi, soprano, was a charming and vivacious "Rosina," while Vincent Mattina, lyric tenor, exemplified the merry life of "Figaro," barber of Seville. Brooks Dunbar, tenor, sung the role of the "Count of Almavivi," Constante Sorvino appeared as "Don Bartolo," the guardian, and Nino Carboni, bass as "Don Basilio," the music master. Dolores Cassenelli, mezzo soprano, gave a surety to her minor role of "Bertha."

The glamor that always attends an opera performance was present last night in the sprinkling of formal dress seen throughout the audience. Between acts the patrons adjourned to the foyer to exchange comments about the performance and greet friends.

Approximately 1,000 pupils attended the special student matinee in the afternoon and from all reports entered lustily into the performance.

WIDOW DIES

Mrs. Jeanette Hess Succumbs at Ashland Hospital.

ASHLAND—Mrs. Jeanette Mae Hess, widow of Dr. Gilbert Hess, one of the founders of Hess-Clark Inc., died today in Samaritan hospital here after a week's illness.

Born in Congress, Wayne county, she attended Wooster college and taught in Ashland county schools before her marriage to Dr. Gilbert Hess.

A member of the Presbyterian church, the Lotus club, Eastern Star lodge, the Wednesday bridge club, and a former member of the Ashland school board, Mrs. Hess was active in many civic affairs.

She is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Milton G. Miller and Mrs. S. F. Moherman, both of Ashland.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Friday in the home with Rev. H. E. Andrews, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial will be in Ashland cemetery.

Laff-a-Day

"But, George, I thought surf-board riding looked sort of different in the news-reels!"

There are some cases where even two college degrees won't get a man a job. Today a 27-year-old holder of both a B. A. and an M. A. degree walked into the Mansfeild Naval recruiting station to enlist with a rating in a technical branch of the Naval reserve but was told that his two arts degrees meant less to that branch of the service than a bachelor of science degree or training in some kind of technical work.

The sudden appearance of ice and snow has started the Mansfield Girl Scouts on plans for their bird-feeding program. Each year the Scouts supply the more than dozen feeding stations erected at South Park by the Audubon club as well as personally set out suet and grain for their feathered friends. Definite plans as to how the program will be carried on will be made at a Scout leaders' meeting Monday night in First Methodist church.

Although Mansfield's street department sands and salts slippery hills during the winter, there are times when a sudden storm catches them unprepared. Members of the city's new traffic squad are working on a plan to avoid this. If their plan is carried out, barrels of sand or salt will be placed along the edge of the road where the dangerous hills exist so that truck drivers and motorists, finding the street dangerous can help themselves.

Charles Silsby, former student and flying instructor at the Mansfield airport, predicted in a recent talk before the New Smyrna, Fla., Rotary club that commercial flying will help to fill the gap and prevent a depression during the re-adjustment period following the present war. Silsby, whose home is at Greenwich, is employed by a commercial air line in Florida. Thousands of civilian pilots being trained now by the government will buy planes after this war just as many persons bought automobiles after the first World war to help lighten the economic depression, Silsby said.

STILL BUSY

Mansfield Navy Office Learns New Enlistment Rules.

With more than 100 applicants crowding the Mansfield Naval recruiting station in the last three days Recruiting Officer W. G. Cox announced today that due to the manifold increase in enlistments, the Cleveland central recruiting office had announced that it is no longer possible to handle all accepted applicants as they are sent in.

To remedy this difficulty each of the area substations, of which Mansfield is one, will send accepted applicants on a certain day of the week instead of at the time they are accepted, as formerly.

"Accepted applicants from the Mansfield station will be shipped to Cleveland on Wednesday of each week, beginning next week," Cox said.

Cox added however, that men could still be sent immediately upon their acceptance here, in special cases.

NEW FACTORY

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A small arms ammunition factory, costing "several million dollars," will be built at Kings Mills, (Warren county) O., war department officials said today.

The factory, to be known as Kings Mills ordnance plant, will employ 2,500 persons, 60 per cent of whom will be women. Although no contract for construction has been awarded, the department said the Remington Arms company of Bridgeport, Conn., was given a letter of intent for pre-construction planning, testing and designing purposes not to exceed $100,000.

RETENTION OF FORCES SOUGHT FOR DURATION

Naval Enlistments Already Frozen By Bill Passed By Congress.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The United States moved today to make the fullest use of its great reservoir of manpower.

Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the house military committee called for swift passage of legislation which would permit retention of all fighting forces for the duration, and allow selectees to be dispatched to any point on the globe. A similar measure was ready for senate action.

Congress sent to the president only yesterday a bill freezing naval enlistments for six months beyond the end of the war.

Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey, national selective service director, said reclassification of selectees who had been given occupational deferments was under consideration, and that later the reclassification of men deferred because of dependents might be discussed.

Although General Hershey said there was a "strong possibility" that congress would lower the draft age minimum from 21 to 18, Rep. May deprecated the likelihood of such a change.

He said that if any change in the present registration limits of 21 through 35 became necessary, he thought it more likely that the maximum might be raised to some extent.

General Hershey spoke of the possibility of calling up men of 28 or over, who under the revised selective service act were deferred from call, or released if already inducted.

May pointed out that the army has an additional reservoir of a million men each year—the youngsters who reach the age of 21.

There is another pool of approximately 1,000,000 men presently available—men who received 1-A classifications after registration, but who have not been called up.

After congress made 28 the new top age limit for selectees, the army began releasing men over that age who already had been inducted. They numbered about 200,000, and although the army has now halted all discharges, the order was expected to make little difference to this group, whose release was scheduled for completion today. Most of them already have gone home.

They are still enlisted reserves, however, and as such subject to recall for active duty at any time.

Sorrow Turns to Joy at Word Two Ohioans Are Alive

(By Associated Press)

Sorrow turned to joy in two Ohio homes today when the adjutant general's office at Washington telegraphed that Private Wilbur Carr, 19, of Miamisburg, and Sergeant James H. Derthick, 22, Ravenna, were not killed in the Japanese raid on Hawaii as first reported officially.

The war department wired Mr. and Mrs. John Carr of Miamisburg that their son, Wilbur, is "alive and well" and that the previous notification of his death was erroneous.

Another war department message informed Paul Derthick, Ravenna foundry worker, that his son, James, was not dead but only wounded in the same attack.

Both Ohioans were believed stationed at Wheeler Field, Honolulu.

NATAL AIRPORT CROSSROADS OF SOUTH ATLANTIC

Panair Speeds Development of Facilities; Axis Planes Call Often.

(Editor's Note: Brazil, larger in area than the United States, figures ever larger in hemisphere defense. Here is a story for The News-Journal on Brazilian defenses, written by E. M. Castro during a 3,000-mile trip along the Brazilian coast.)

By E. M. CASTRO
(Wide World Feature Writer)

NATAL, Brazil—Thrust out into the South Atlantic ocean — 1600 miles further east than New York —is in the almost Venetian city of Natal—today the crossroads for airplanes linking the two hemispheres.

Now those planes are commercial transports.

Soon, as the United States southern ferry service to Britain and her allies get under way, they will be bombers.

It would be hard to over-estimate the military importance of this city as the result of the European war and hemisphere defense.

Like Lisbon, Natal is a focal point, oddly enough, for the commercial transport planes of both Axis and non-Axis powers.

During recent years an important stop for Pan-American Airways and the Italian Lati transatlantic service as well as the former Air France Lines, Natal is the closest city on this continent to Vichy-held Dakar in Africa, 1800 miles across the ocean.

Natal's present airbase facilities comprise 4,200,000 square meters, of which approximately 60 per cent is occupied by the nearly completed field and buildings of Pan American Airways and its Brazilian subsidiary, Panair do Brazil. First class field and facilities also are owned by the inactive Air France, part of which are used by Lati—at present the only air mail link with Europe, through Italy.

Natal also is a landing point for Condor Airlanes, subsidiary of Lufthansa, German air transport system, and chief rival of Panair in South America.

Condor has no landing field in Natal, using that section of the Air France field also used by Lati, but boasts a well-equipped seaplane base adjacent to the seaplane base of Panair. This Condor establishment includes ample hangar facilities, repair shops, offices and four subterranean tanks with a capacity of 8,000 gallons of gasoline each, as well as two radio stations of 800 and 310 watts.

Panair planes pass through Natal four times weekly on international or coastal runs, there are two Condor arrivals and departures weekly and the Lati plane departing for Europe stops here.

Recent construction and enlargement have made Panair facilities the most complete and modern in Natal. There are reports that the idle Air France facilities may be absorbed by the Brazilian government and incorporated with Panair.

The Panair field is assuming rapidly growing importance with the establishment of the plane ferry service to West Africa, and the new transatlantic service of Panair, to use Natal as a hopping-off point.

Planes from the United States are arriving here in steadily increasing numbers, to be refueled before taking off for Africa—to a point 1900 miles away — and from there continuing to destinations in Africa or the Near East. Thus far the planes have been transports, but this route shortly will become one of the most important lifelines for bombers as well.

Recently I watched the arrival of six Douglas transports, two landing one afternoon and four the following day. The men waste no time. On the day the second group arrived, the first took off, and the following evening three more left.

These planes all bear the Pan American Airways insignia. As soon as they arrive, the crews jump out, have a bit of food and refreshment, check their planes and usually sleep on the ground beside their ships. Invariably they seem in high spirits.

The new Panair base, ten miles south of the city, already in use and scheduled to be completed within six months, represents an expenditure of approximately $500,000.

The field equipment includes a number of subterranean deposits for gasoline, a 2,000 watt radio station, its own running water system, and all that is necessary for a modern airport to handle heavy traffic.

In addition, Panair is constructing a seaplane base on the river Potengy, less than two miles east of here, with a large concrete floor and landing ramp.

The strategic importance of Natal has led the Brazilian government to concentrate a large armed force here and start building of a modern naval base.

Col. Edwin L. Sibert, United States military attache, and Col. Perry Jones, British military attache, have spent much time in this area coordinating hemisphere defense plans with Brazilian authorities.

Natal, capital of the state of Rio Grande do Norte, boasts a population of 50,000—out of the state's 700,000 inhabitants.

The city is built along the shores of the river a few miles above its mouth into the sea, and presents a Venice-like aspect with its streets ending in stone steps leading down into the water and its houses built out over the water.

San Diego Zoo Will Seek To Breed Gorillas

SAN DIEGO—(INS)—With the purchase of two young female gorillas, the San Diego zoo hopes to conduct in the future, the first successful breeding of gorillas in captivity.

Capt. W. C. Crandall, president of the Zoological society, announced the purchase of the two animals from Henry Trefflich, New York animal dealer.

With the arrival of the animals here, the gorilla population at the zoo will be increased to four. They will be the only gorillas on the Pacific coast, said zoo officials. Mbongo and Ngagi, famous gorillas, have been owned by the San Diego zoo since 1931. Both were captured by the late Martin Johnson, African explorer and big game hunter.

Zoo officials said the two females are too young for breeding considerations at present. Both are believed to be about nine years old.

After the animals get older, however, and grow accustomed to their surroundings, efforts will be made to breed them with Mbongo and Ngagi.

Iranians have discarded the turban and the veil.

English Mothers Face Shortage of Baby Carriages

LONDON—(INS)—Latest wartime shortage in Britain now affects baby carriages. During the coming year approximately 300,000 British "Juniors" will have to do without their baby carriage.

The shortage is getting more acute. Production of pre-war models ended some time ago, and no more containing more than 14 pounds of steel can be made.

Plans are being rushed for the reconditioning of second-hand baby carriages. Some mothers are arranging to loan prams to their neighbors when needed. But it is very doubtful if the deficiency can be made up.

Normally, British babies require 600,000 perambulators a year. During the next year only 300,000 will be made.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

This is my idea of a silly assignment—grinding out a daily sports column while New York and San Francisco are huddling in cellars to the tune of air raid alarms.

But life lives on, and so, we are told by no less an authority than Gene Tunney, will sports live on during these stirring times.

Tunney, who has inaugurated a program of sports and physical education in many of Uncle Sam's training camps, has long preached a gospel of physical preparedness, not only for the armed forces, but for the entire nation.

So, if a word or two from this jitterbrain will keep someone interested in sports, let's drop the word.

No longer ago than last Saturday night the fact that Mansfield high school's bucket-tossing Tygers had dropped their first two cage games was regarded in some circles as a major disaster, coming on the heels of an undefeated football season.

Now it's become a matter of little importance. Our Tygers, and all other schoolboy athletic teams in the country, have suddenly become just a bunch of boys playing games with other boys from other schools.

* * *

Whether they win, lose or draw is unimportant. What is important is to keep 'em playing. And if continued fan support is necessary to keep 'em playing, let's give 'em that.

* * *

Yes sir, it is now important that we keep our citizens strong and healthy.

And I had just about given up that program for myself.

Wouldn't it be awful, now, if I had to take up bowling? I'll admit I swung a golf club much more often than should have been necessary last summer, but that exercise may not carry me through the winter.

Beauford Glover, the old Mansfield belter, who had been forced to lay off from ring action because of a couple of busted ribs resulting from a bout in Pittsburgh, is back in there swinging again, and has been booked on the second of a double main-go at Toledo next Monday night, going 10 rounds against Carman Notch of Pittsburgh.

Glover recently lost a split decision to Maxie Berger in a Cleveland bout. Frankie Hammer, California heavy, meets Joe O'Gatty in the other 10-rounder at Toledo, which will be refereed by Jack Dempsey.

I'd like to call him Battling Beau-Beau Beautord, but down in the flats I hear him called BYOUford and BOOford, so I guess I'll just forget the whole thing.

Baker-Windsor Still Set Pace

The Baker-Windsor team continued to cop top honors in the mixed-doubles bowling league at Colony alleys last night with a 1039 total, but Godley led the men with 561 and Mary McMullen set the pace for the women with 532.

Ev and Frank Jocha rolled a 1024 total, and C. Spain with a "D. H." partner, and handicap of 183, also had 1024.

Feller Set To Enlist With Navy

Cleveland Speed Ball King To Join Tunney.

By GRAHAM HOVEY

CHICAGO — (INS) — Old rockin' chair had Ol' Mose Grove, the United States navy had Bobby Feller and the Bums of Brooklyn still had Dolph Camilli today as the annual meeting of the Major league baseball clubs swung into its semifinal stage.

If anything could be certain at this uncertain meeting, however, it was that Camelli would not be on first base for the Bums at the start of the 1942 season. Why a club should be so anxious to rid itself of the National league's most valuable player is hard to fathom, but so are the Dodgers, of course.

All Dolph did for Brooklyn last year was to clout 34 homers, bat in 120 runs and field like Hal Chase. Yet, the grapevine has had him moving along to the Cincinnati Reds, the St. Louis Cardinals, the New York Giants and now—of all teams—the Yankees. The Yankee deal reportedly was close to consummation at an early hour this morning. Should it materialize, it would constitute the worst abuse yet perpetrated of the "gentleman's agreement" method of circumventing the waiver rule, in the opinion of many veteran baseball observers.

* * *

Larry MacPhail, generalissimo of the Brooklyn forces, was said to be anxious to dispose of Camilli to an American league club to eliminate the possibility of Dolph coming back to help kick the Dodgers around as a member of an opposing team.

* * *

Feller's application for enlistment as a chief boatswain's mate in the Naval reserve had been anticipated since the young fast ball king conferred Monday with Lieut. Commander Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion and director of the navy's physical fitness program.

Bob placed his application with Tunney at the Great Lakes naval training station and officials there said he probably would be sworn in within a day or two and assigned to a post as physical instructor at some naval station or base.

The granting of an unconditional release to Lefty Grove by the Boston Red Sox at the pitcher's own request created remarkably little excitement. Apparently Grove had made known his intention to retire at the close of the 1941 season, when he pitched his 300th major league victory. Lefty, who was brought into the big leagues by Connie Mack with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1925, thus terminating his career after 16 full seasons in the American league and 21 in organized baseball.

* * *

Melvin Ott, the new field boss of the New York Giants, was whistling a merrier tune today, for his third base problem had been solved. The Giants bought Billy Werber from the Cincinnati Reds in a straight cash transaction. Werber, who started his major league career with the Yankees in 1930 and who went to the Reds in 1939, slumped in his hitting last year after starring in the 1940 world series against the Detroit Tigers. The Giants sold outfielders Joe Moore and Morrie Arnovich to Indianapolis of the American association.

* * *

Purchase of Werber was believed to have dissipated the Giants' interest in Arky Vaughan of Pittsburgh, who was said to be the object of a long huddle between Bill Terry and Frankie Frisch yesterday. Frisch was signed to another one-year contract as Pirate manager yesterday by President Bill Benswanger.

The Philadelphia Phillies sold Outfielder Johnny Rizzo to Brooklyn.

July 7 was the date set for the 1942 all-star game, to be played at Ebbets field in Brooklyn.

AKRON MAY FACE LOSS OF YANK FINANCIAL AID

AKRON—(AP)—A report that the New York Yankees would withdraw support from the Akron team of the Mid-Atlantic Baseball league next season brought Roy Brandenberger, busines manager of the local club, the comment that he has heard "nothing official." Representatives of the Canton club said they heard the report at the recent minor league meeting.

Mansfield Keglers Set for Eagles' and Lorain Jousts

Mansfield bowlers are all steamed up today over two special tournaments, the Eagles "get acquainted" five-man event booked at Colony alleys Dec. 20-21, and the Inter-City tourney at Lorain which Mansfielders are trying to obtain for this city next winter.

* * *

Jim Orr, manager of the Eagles tourney, said today that present indications point to an entry list of 200 teams for the near-holiday event.

* * *

At least 40 teams are expected from Mansfield, Orr said, 10 from Marion, seven from Elyria, five from Norwalk, seven from Wooster, five from Ashland, two from Crestline, and one each from Glouster, New Philadelphia, Ottawa, and Mt. Vernon.

Orr said he and members of his committee had not yet had a chance to visit Fremont, Fostoria, Findlay, Port Clinton, and Sandusky, but that further entries are expected from those cities.

Entry fees for the five-man event are $2 per man, of which $1 will go for prize money, 60 cents for bowling, and 40 cents for Dutch lunch to be served at the Eagles. The tournament is open to both Eagles and the general public.

* * *

The Mansfield Bowling association, in its drive to obtain the Inter-City tournament for this city next winter, is attempting to line up 40 to 50 teams, including many booster teams, for competition in this year's tourney at Lorain. A vote from each team would be a vote for Mansfield for next season's joust.

* * *

In order to make it easy for Mansfield booster teams to enter the Lorain tournament, the association has announced that $5 of the $15 entry fee for each booster team will be paid through the association.

HOT STOVE WARMUP

Rival major league managers have just about given up the idea of outsmarting Hans Lobert since they learned that one of his first acts on reaching Chicago for the Big League meetings was to take Bill Klem to lunch . . . CADETS' ARDOR KEYS TRAINING AT RANDOLPH

Basic Course Rigorous at West Point of the Air.

(By United Press)

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—At Randolph Field, they're trained to take the tough breaks with a grin. It is part of the cadet code. Only one exception is made to this tradition. That is when a cadet is told that he is to be dismissed—that he lacks the qualifications to get his wings.

Then he may cry openly without losing caste.

They know that in most cases it means the end of a dream for which he had sacrificed. He gets silent sympathy.

In this picturesque air training base—called the West Point of the Air—the cadets refer to dismissal as "washing out." It is a nightmare that haunts many of them. Eliminated, most of the youths try to stay in aviation.

Some become bombardiers. Others become observers. Many turn to commercial airlines in ground capacities.

What makes them fail? Officers say that, in many instances, it is innate fear of the air. Some fail for physical reasons not at first detected. Others simply lack the necessary deft touch.

Randolph Field is only 10 years old as a flight training school, yet it already is rich in tradition. Here the cadets spend the most critical time of their training period. The field has 400 instructors, and 1,300 recruits. It covers 2,300 acres.

It is a striking city of tan stucco buildings. Morale is keen. The officers say that operations always were efficient despite the tremendous increase in enrollment due to the emergency. The field had been in operation long enough that it could absorb the new load without losing precision.

The annual production rate of flying cadets is about 4,500 annually. Constantly, this figure is being stepped up.

The cadets come to Randolph after 10 weeks at a primary training school. At Randolph those who survive receive another 10 weeks of basic training. Then they go to advanced training schools—such as Brooks and Kelly—for their final 10 weeks of polishing.

But it is at Randolph where a cadet really learns to fly. Thus, most of the graduates regard Randolph as the real alma mater of the schools in which they were trained.

The discipline is sharp. Admittedly, the first few weeks are hard. A man who can't take it has no place here.

Between the officers and cadets is a strong affection—although there is an invisible gap that never is bridged. The cadets are taught their status. Later many of the cadets return as instructors. Occasionally, a cadet, after soloing, gets over-confident. Which sometimes leads to recklessness. For this the offender is rigidly punished but seldom dismissed. The officers repress brashness, but like the youngsters with spark and spunk.

Calls Shortage Of Engineers A Defense Threat

CORVALLIS, Ore.—(INS)—One of the most serious bottlenecks of the entire defense program may be caused by a shortage of trained engineers, according to Dean R. H. Dearborn of the Oregon State college school of engineering.

Citing the U. S. bureau of labor statistics, Dean Dearborn said the United States will need 35,000 additional graduate engineers by April of next year. Normally, engineering schools of the nation graduate only 12,000 men a year, he said.

In the Pacific northwest alone, Dean Dearborn declared, the defense program will need 2,000 graduate engineers and 3,200 draftsmen before next April, while all the schools of the region turn out only 550 men a year.

CHAPTER XIII

Almost an hour later Aunt Cassie entered Carol's small room without knocking and closed the door behind her. Something in her face suggested to her niece that she was the bearer of unusual tidings, but she was unprepared for the terse announcement that greeted her.

"That Mr. Dennison is in the parlor. He asked to see you."

"Me?" Carol half rose from her chair. Her eyes were wide with amazement.

"He said you. I suppose he knows what he wants. I let him in."

"Oh....But I'm not dressed! Do you mind asking him to wait just a few minutes?" Carol turned to her mirror a trifle breathlessly.

"Yes, I mind. You look plenty good enough as you are. I'd like to see more color in your face. But don't wait to do that. I'll tell him you'll be right down. He should have let you know if he was going to call. It can't be anything important." And she went out.

* * *

Carol's mind was in a whirl, but Aunt Cassie probably was right. Something to do about that office job perhaps. He might have been to see Patty first. Her fingers were not quite steady as she arranged her chair, applied power and lipstick. Oddly enough she found herself thinking with a feeling of relief that there was little danger of Wige appearing on the scene tonight. She drew a deep breath as she made a final survey of herself in the glass. It occurred to her that she might have entirely too much color in her cheeks.

She was quite composed, however, when she entered the parlor. Dennison sprang to his feet and bowed.

"I hope you won't think this a too-bold intrusion, Miss Delaine," he began in a voice she never had heard him use. It was frank and friendly, the same as his face. "Are you busy just now?"

"No, indeed. Please sit down." But Chester remained standing.

"I am going to be bolder still. I would like to talk to you a few minutes if I may. I was just on my way to Centertown to leave some papers at the home of any attorney. Won't you drive over with me? It's delightful outside and I...I very much wish some company." He smiled almost boyishly.

"Why I..."

"You don't need to dress. Just slip on a coat. I lowered the top on the car this evening and it might be the least bit cool. Please! You'll be doing a nice favor to a lonely man."

If he had used any other word save "lonely," her answer would have been a polite refusal. Carol scarcely was aware that it touched some responding chord. If she was not exactly lonely, she did wish to escape for a little time. From herself, from the slight feeling of despondency that her father's talk had produced. After all—

Why not?

"Very well," she said. "If you are coming right back."

"I am. And thank you very much."

"Then if you will excuse me until I get my coat...and tell my father I am going out for a few minutes."

"Surely." Dennison's smile was quizzical.

Andy did not glance up from his game as Carol made her brief announcement for the doorway. Insteady, he observed pleasantly to his partner: "Hundred Aces, old man." He smiled broadly. "Looks like we'd got hold of a fortune teller's deck maybe. What was that you said, ducklet mine?"

"I said I wouldn't be out long." She turned away hastily, trying to ignore Amos's delighted grin.

Once again Chester Dennison seemed to experience some difficulty in approaching the topic he had in mind, now that his passenger was seated comfortably at his side. This time he sent the long roadster forging ahead at high sped and it was Carol who first broke the silence.

"I didn't know they were working at night out here!"

* * *

A turn in the road had revealed a busy scene on the new factory location. Strings of lamps illuminated the entrance roadway. Beyond, batteries of floodlights revealed machinery and trucks, men silhouetted against the glare, all to an accompaniment of crashes and the steady rumbling of gears.

"Only until midnight," Chester explained. "And temporary. They're doing a rush job on pouring new foundation forms." As the noise subsided behind them, he continued—picking his words carefully:

"Miss Delaine. I believe I owe you an apology. If you will accept it. That was my main reason for trying to arrange a more or less private interview.

"I can't think of any reason for your apologizing to me," Carol remarked quietly. She was going to be cautious also. At the same time, she realized there was no trace as yet of his former cynical manner and was glad. So far he had been quite nice.

"You are being very kind," he said quickly. "The first day I met you I was in a vile humor." A soft laugh answered him.

"But I don't see how anyone could have expected you to play Pollyanna with that nail hole in your foot."

"Sure. It hurt. But that was no reason for acting the lout. As a matter of fact, my bosses were peeved because something had upset their plans here temporarily. They made me the whipping boy, if you know what I mean."

"I didn't understand then. But, I do now. You were looking for my father that day. You found him later."

"Yes. But I didn't have to be rude to you. I was. And that is why I'm apologizing at this late date."

"It isn't necessary."

"Nevertheless, I am. And when I have the opportunity I intend to let your father know that I think he was more gentlemanly about the whole affair than I. I mean it."

"You seemed to mean that remark about having fallen among thieves," Carol reminded demurely.

"I hoped you had forgotten that. But I deserve it. Offensive conceit on my part and nothing less. Mr. Delaine was very nice about it, but he rather put me in my place on that score the last time we talked."

"Then you don't think."

"If you are trying to ask if it was a perfectly bona fide transaction, the answer is yes. Of course. Our concern is used to having its own way about everything and—that's the whole matter in a nutshell."

"Thank you," she murmured.

* * *

Another long silence, broken at length by Chester's blunt:

"There's another thing. I hope it won't make you think less of me than you probably do. When I first met you—"

"You were in a vile humor."

"Yes. But it didn't keep me from making a discovery. It was about myself." He seemed uncertain how to put what he had in mind.

"Yes?" Carol said politely.

"I was pretty sure that our people were going to pay your father rather a large amount for his holdings... more than we did, in fact. I don't know why.... But it made me stubborn. Yes, I do know. That was the discovery. This isn't going to make sense, but I....I didn't want you to have that money."

"I don't expect you to understand that, when I didn't myself," Chester assured Carol when she made no reply to the startling admission that he hadn't wanted her to share her father's newly acquired wealth.

"And I'm sure I do not," she answered. Her words carried a faint suggestion that perhaps it was not important after all. But she noticed that the speed of the car slackened. Evidently an explanation was forthcoming and there was grim resolution in Dennison's next words.

"That evening I first talked to your father, he told me he was more interested in the money on your account than his own. I must admit that I was bowled over when I found you were Mr. Delaine's daughter. I was prepared not to like him under the circumstances, but you . . . You aren't the sort of person anyone could dislike. I'm not doing so very well, am I?"

"It all seems rather unnecessary."

"It would. But it's a part of the discovery I was telling you of. When I came up to your office the second afternoon, I had already given Mr. Delaine his money. I was positive that you knew all about it. I admit I wanted to know what your reaction was . . . same as I did that day I gave you a lift home. I made a perfect goon out of myself then and It should have been enough. Undeniable curiosity on my part of course."

"It seems too bad that you weren't rewarded."

"But I was!" He thumped on the wheel with his fist for emphasis. "I had a little opportunity to visit with you and my fears were confirmed."

"Fears? About me?"

"Yes. I told you it didn't make sense. But may I try to explain?"

"I can't very well refuse. But it still sounds absurd."

"It is. There was something so very genuine and real about you . . . I don't know how to say it. But I felt it. And then you told me that if you were rich that you'd like to see life after living all these years in Jericho . . . you said travel, I know. But it wasn't just what you said. It was the way you looked when you said it. And you didn't know that you were right on the brink of your dream. I guess—I guess I was a little afraid of what it might do to you. I didn't want to see you changed from what you are."

"I remember you did say something about good little girls."

Halas Scouts Halas: Pro Fans Ask If Hand Tipped

By STEVE SNIDER

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—George Halas, the noted magazine writer, has been spying on the football coach by the same name and the question is who is outsmarting whom?

In the old days the likeable roughneck coach of the Chicago Bears would resent being called a "whom" but now that he's joined the literary set with a national magazine piece about that 73 to 0 affair at Washington last season he'll have to accept the consequences.

* * *

Backbone of his story was the manner in which he outsmarted the Washington defense, which employed the same formations in the playoff game it had used earlier in stopping the Bears without a touchdown. Halas simply designed a new offense hoping the Redskins would stick to their proved defense.. Bingo: 73 to 0.

* * *

The situation is exactly the same this week as the Bears prepare for their third meeting of the year with the Green Bay Packers and on this game rests the right to battle the Giants of New York for the world championship Dec. 21.

For three periods of the second game, Green Bay stopped the big bad Bears stone cold. If they retain that same defense, the Bears might split them wide open as they did Washington.

* * *

The older Packer defense is more fluid than that Washington used in the last championship playoff. It features a six and seven man line with the middle boys bearing down on the T formation quarterback so swiftly Bears' plays have little time to form. In the fourth period, however, the Bears ran almost wild enough to win—scoring two touchdowns.

* * *

If you think Green Bay is worried you ought to see Halas. He can't figure whether the Packers have scouted Halas, the writer, or Halas, the coach.

Halas the writer has tipped a trade secret the coach well might have used this week.

STOCK MARKET STILL SHOWS WAR PRESSURE

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market continued under pressure today but selling volume in the early proceedings was smaller than in the previous session despite the British government's announcement of the loss of the warships Prince of Wales and Repulse off Malaya.

There was a moderate cushion of support at the start and initial declines were narrow as a rule. Offerings increased somewhat near the second hour when leaders generally were in arrears fractions to around 2 points.

Although still dominated by the adverse news from the Far East the market maintained an orderly front and brokers reported a fair inflow of buying orders slightly under the ruling quotations.

Among reports from the industrial sector noted in Wall Street boardrooms was the weekly survey of electric output which placed energy consumption for the period ended Dec. 6 at 3,368,870,000 kilowatt hours, a new record high.
